N. Viet Bombers Add New Threat

Cong Hoping Next Attack Spurs Revolt

WASHINGTON (AP)—Top U.S. officials expect Communist forces to launch a second wave of attacks against the cities and towns of South Vietnam. But they say Communist losses in the first offensive have been so heavy the new onslaught should be weaker.

On the basis of information from prisoners and documents captured in the fighting, officials say they are convinced the Viet Cong intended to hold many population centres and to set off a popular uprising.

Presumably they would have the same objective in the expected new drive.

TROOPS ALERT

Authorities believe U.S. and South Vietnamese forces are in a better state of readiness for the expected second wave than they were for the first.

This is attributed partly to the high state of alert on which these forces are being kept and partly to the heavy Communist casualties, which U.S. authorities put at 25,000 killed and 5,000 captured.

On the positive side of the intensive fighting, officials say no South Vietnamese military units defected.

There were no popular uprisings in support of the Communists, no population centres were held by the Communists, and the Communists suffered high losses, these officials said.

On the negative side are cited the problems of refugee care and rebuilding and the damage to the pacification program—designed to secure hundreds of South Vietnamese population centres and win the people's loyalty to the Saigon government by giving them security.

Still Peace Hope, Russia Tells U.S.

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, says the U.S. still has an opportunity of breaking the deadlock over peace negotiations with North Vietnam.

"The issue is whether Washington will take advantage of this opportunity or will continue along the dangerous road of aggression and piracy," the newspaper says.

A commentary by Pravda's Hanoi correspondent, Oleg Ignatyev, deals with a recent statement by North Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh reiterating an offer to start peace talks if the U.S. unconditionally stops the bombings and all other acts of war against North Vietnam.

The commentary, and a statement issued Friday night by the official Tass news agency taking much the same attitude, are printed in Pravda along with news that Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev has pledged continuing Soviet aid and support for the Viet Cong in South Vietnam.

Political observers said the combined Soviet support for stepped-up Viet Cong action in South Vietnam and for Hanoi's latest peace offer is evidence that the Viet Cong offensive launched in Vietnam last week was intended as a lever to bring the United States to the negotiating table on Hanoi's terms.

Referring to the North Vietnamese peace talk offers, the Tass statement said:

"If the United States truly wants talks, then what prevents it from taking advantage of the proposals of the North Vietnamese government and the South Vietnam National Liberation Front? Nothing prevents it from doing so at all."

REPUBLICANS BICKER AS TRASH PILE MOUNTS

NEW YORK (AP) — Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller today pressed his effort to end the now politically entangled sanitation strike without a national guard call-up as the massive garbage pileup grew and health and fire hazards mounted.

Holding out against Mayor John V. Lindsay's repeated pleas for a guard call-up, the governor accused the mayor of a breach of position in the strike and began new talks to seek a permanent solution to the crisis.

As the deepening division between the two Republicans became apparent, there was new urgency for a settlement in the disruption of private trash collections throughout the city. This added 5,000 tons to the daily accumulation.

Meanwhile, New York's Central Labor Council, which commands all metropolitan AFL-CIO unions, voted unanimously today to cripple the city with a general strike if the National Guard is called out.

Khe Sanh Tension Rising

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. command today disclosed the presence of three Russian-made jet bombers on North Vietnamese flight lines within 30 minutes flying time of Khe Sanh.

The report further escalated the potential scope of the developing battle for the American fortress.

In Saigon, South Vietnamese and American troops battled a force of about 1,000 Viet Cong attacking the city from the northwest and reported killing 278 in heavy fighting.

FIRST TIME

The North Vietnamese used tanks for the first time in the war last week near Khe Sanh, and the Communist potential increased with the three Russian IL28 bombers at Phuc Yen air base 17 miles north of Honoi. It is the nerve center of the North Vietnamese air force.

The report said U.S. airmen dropped bombs that landed "on or in close proximity" to one of three Russian planes.

BASED ELSEWHERE

Three other IL28s are believed based elsewhere in North Vietnam.

The presence of the bombers and the ferocity of the Communists' lunar New Year offensive were believed major factors in the decision to resume heavy air raids into North Vietnam's Hanoi-Haiphong power core.

U.S. bombers hit the Kep and Cat BI air bases defending Hanoi and Haiphong today in the first strikes of any intensity deep into North Vietnam in more than a month.

Hopes Rise in Pueblo Crisis As Special U.S. Envoy Due

SEOUL (AP) — Hopes for release of the Pueblo crew members rose again today with reports on the fifth U.S.-North Korean secret meeting and the impending arrival from Washington of U.S. trouble-shooter Cyrus Vance.

The crew members have been held prisoner in North Korea for 17 days.

A source close to the South Korean government reported Seoul officials believe the North Koreans may hand over the one dead crew member and three injured men in the not too distant future, but that the other 79 U.S. prisoners will have a longer wait.

Vance was scheduled to arrive in Seoul Sunday morning. He recently won attention with his successful mediation efforts to head off war between Greece and Turkey over Cyprus.

Smoothing things over with South Korean leaders is seen as a major though unannounced purpose of Vance's visit. The South Koreans have been piqued by what they regard as the U.S. stress on the Pueblo incident and relative inattention to the North Korean guerrilla attempt on the life of President Chung Hee Park.

The White House said Friday that Vance was going to Seoul to see Park about "the measures to be taken by our two governments to deal with a North Korea suddenly grown more pugnacious."

In a development from Washington, U.S. officials disclosed that eight MiG jet fighters were overhead during the seizure of the U.S. electronic intelligence gathering ship Jan. 23. The officials also said that by piecing together various scraps of intelligence they have determined that numerous shots were fired across the Pueblo's bow before she was halted.

Contradicting earlier U.S. statements that the Pueblo had observed radio silence from Jan. 10 to Jan. 21, the officials said the ship transmitted a routine radio message Jan. 20 — three days before her capture — indicating she was outside North Korea's 12-mile limit.

North Korea has demanded an admission by the U.S. that the Pueblo violated North Korean territorial waters, an apology and a promise that it won't happen again. The North Koreans say this is a prerequisite for the crew's release.

TRUDEAU TO DECIDE IN 10 DAYS

Ontario Cheers Mr. Yes-No

TORONTO (CP) — Declared Liberal leadership candidates sought support Friday at the party's Onatrio convention in the shadow of non-candidate Pierre Trudeau, a smash hit in a two-hour appearance.

About 500 convention-goers gave the elegant federal justice minister a mob-scene welcome in a room hired by his supporters at the convention hotel.

One Trudeau promoter said he was flabbergasted at the welcome. Casual in a sports jacket, Mr. Trudeau stayed calm in the crowd crush, autographing convention programs, handshaking and accepting the greetings of well-wishers.

The atmosphere prompted one man to shake Mr. Trudeau's hand and say: "God bless you."

Mr. Trudeau, during a session-opening news conference, said he had yet to make up his mind on whether to become the French-Canadian candidate in the race.

He expected to say one way or the other within 10 days after more private talks with supporters across the country.

Careful not to upset convention routine, Mr. Trudeau left before the evening's speech-making marathon by nine declared candidates began. As a non-candidate, Mr. Trudeau was not permitted to speak.

Mr. Trudeau's political foray into English Canada was the work of the newly-formed Ontario for Trudeau committee, which hoped the reception might put the slim and smiling minister into the race.

SENSATION of Ontario Liberal convention in Toronto Friday was brief appearance by Justice Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau (right), who may seek leadership of the party. (CP Wirephoto)

GM Strike Under Way

TORONTO (CP) — More than 25,000 hourly-rated workers at seven General Motors plants in six Canadian cities officially went on strike at midnight.

Bargaining between the company and the United Auto Workers union broke off at 11:15 p.m., 45 minutes before the union's strike deadline. There are no signs of further negotiations.

All 24 Plucked From Sea As Canadian Ship Lists

NEW YORK (AP)—Twenty-four persons were plucked from two life boats and a life raft in the stormy Atlantic today and brought aboard a rescue vessel after they abandoned their listing Canadian freighter 550 miles off Cape Hatteras, N.C., the U.S. Coast Guard said.

About 10 hours after the skipper of the 313-foot Charny, out of Quebec, radioed he was abandoning ship, its crew of 22 and two passengers—a man and his wife—were reported aboard the Norwegian freighter Vinni, "all in good condition."

The Vinni was the closest vessel to the Charny when the distress call went out.

The Charny, built in 1958 and owned by North Shipping and Transportation Ltd., was reported listing badly in eight-foot seas but still afloat.

The coast guard cutter Absecon was en route to the scene.

The Charny's captain, Jules Jordain of Cap Chat, Que., first reported his craft had four feet of water in one hold and could remain afloat for no more than four hours. Then, just 10 minutes later, came the radio message: "I think we may turn over. When we abandon ship we'll try and stay close to the vessel."

Meanwhile, about 200 miles from the Charny rescue, the stricken Liberian freighter Pegasos, trailing a heavy oil slick, rendezvoused Friday with a tug.

The 629-foot ship, with six of her crew still aboard, was leaking her cargo of 30,000 tons of oil through one and possibly two cracks in her hull.

INSIDE CITY HALL

'Now We Can Get Cracking!' ...That Was 16 Months Ago

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

Things were a little chilly at City Hall on Thursday and Friday.

The Times, apparently, had committed a cardinal sin on Wednesday evening by reporting that there was a serious hang-up in the Rose-Blanshard Urban Renewal project. And, as we all know, government hang-ups should not be dangled about for the public to gaze on.

Hume

The Rose-Blanshard, by golly, is jogging along on schedule and any problems are picayune.

At least that appears to be what the experts are saying. But it isn't what the facts and the past record are saying.

Just as a refresher let's take a look at the record starting in February, 1966.

We use that starting point out of generosity because it was exactly two years ago that the first practical action commenced in the blighted area. We could, if we wished to be really nasty, go back to 1964 when the first talking started.

Two years of review, however, is enough.

February, 1966: Appraisers, assessors and social workers moved into the Rose-Blanshard area to commence the preliminary survey and the city planner said "the new houses will be architect designed and of the highest quality."

That was before Mr. Greenhalgh had become familiar with the enigmatic smile of J. Everett Brown, deputy minister for municipal affairs and provincial housing commissioner.

And long before he had become familiar with dapper Dan Campbell the minister of municipal affairs who achieved quite a record with instant towns but appears to have difficulty making decisions on existing communities.

May, 1966: City council got down to cases, accepted the comprehensive report compiled diligently by the planners and gave the project the formal green light.

September, 1966: The late Mayor Alfred Toone, the man who fathered the project, reiterated his pledge that "people would come first" when property acquisition started.

November, 1966: Ottawa accepted the urban renewal proposal and agreed to pick up 50 per cent of the $2,003,680 price tag and Dennis Young said joyfully "now we can get cracking."

December, 1966: The official documents were drawn up and signed and Mayor Hugh Stephen said "the work will now proceed quickly."

February, 1967: The end of the first year and the start of a sporadic series of meetings designed to "iron out the details."

Early May, 1967: Demolition of buildings occupying the site earmarked for a new school commence.

Late May, 1967: Property acquisitions had reached the halfway mark and the hard-core property-owning holdouts was starting to emerge. It was the first sure, but not unexpected sign, that the honeymoon was over. Harold Groos, the city appointed ombudsman, advised city hall to start thinking in terms of expropriation. City officials replied that they were hopful that all properties could be acquired without resorting to court action, but added they were prepared to face expropriation proceedings if they must.

June, 1967: J. Everett Brown acknowledged for the first time that the provincial government really did know the project was underway. There will, he said, be no room for the elderly because the noise of children annoys them. And he hinted that his government favored a "call for proposals" which would see the housing units designed and constructed by the award-winning contractor.

July, 1967: John di Castri, a local architect, expressed surprise and concern at Mr. Brown's statement. So did the Amalgamated Construction Association.

The brief flurry of interest soon died.

September, 1967: Then Ald. Geoff Edgelow asked in city council what the hold-up was in the Rose-Blanshard area. He wanted to know which of the three partners was dragging its feet. City hall officials were too polite, or too scared, to point directly at the provincial government.

November, 1967: Land acquisition had ground to a halt, demolition had caught up with purchases and the only sign of activity in the blighted area was on the new school site.

November, 1967: The city manager said "recent discussions with both levels of senior government offer hope that the construction of planned housing will soon be resolved."

January, 1968: City officials were still hopeful that the provincial government would "soon" make its plans known.

February, 1968: The first meeting of the B.C. Housing Management Committee was held. The results, "promising."

And there it is, two years to the month after the first action was taken and we are still waiting to see what a low-rental housing scheme looks like.

But there is no hang-up. None whatsoever. Things, say city hall officials, are proceeding smoothly.

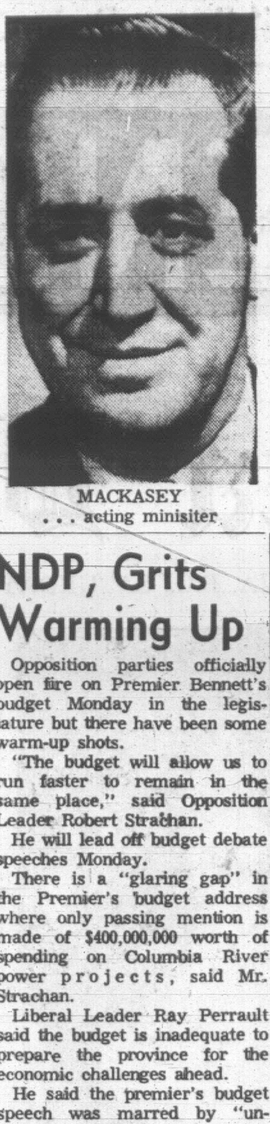
They are also proceeding slowly and expensively, for with every month of delay land acquisition and construction costs creep ever higher on the infiation spiral.

Nobody expected a magic wand to be waved in the Rose-Blanshard area transforming it overnight from a run-down area to a sparkling new development.

But a lot of people, especially those moved to temporary accommodation by the government juggernaut, did, sincerely and patiently, expect that by this time there would be some indication that new homes were being built.

As it stands not only are there no new houses, but, unless Mr. Brown has them tucked in the bottom drawer of his desk, there are no plans for new houses.

The situation may look "promising" to city officials but from the sidelines it looks like a Grad-A foul-up requiring not platitudes, but action.



MACKASEY

Labor Bill Gets New Chieftain

OTTAWA (CP) — Bryce Mackasey, a blunt-speaking Quebec manufacturer of Irish descent, was named to the federal cabinet Friday and given temporary responsibility for the labor portfolio.

The 46-year-old Liberal member for Verdun, long rumored as a cabinet possibility, was appointed minister without portfolio and acting labor minister.

For the last two years he has been parliamentary secretary to Labor Minister Nicholson, who has been assigned to head Canada's delegation at the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development in New Delhi.

Trade Minister Winters attended opening session of the conference but will return to Ottawa this weekend, amid speculation that he may try for the Liberal leadership.

FACES CONTROVERSY

Mr. Mackasey assumes responsibility for labor at a time when the Commons labor committee is getting its teeth into controversial government legislation affecting country-wide bargaining units.

The bill would change the structure of the Canada Labor Relations Board and remove from it the final decision on applications for regional bargaining units.

With Mr. Nicholson planning to retire from federal politics, Mr. Mackasey's handling of the touchy bill is likely to affect his chances for cabinet advancement or for re-appointment under the new Liberal prime minister to be chosen in April.

In an interview after his appointment, he said he is certain the bill can be improved in committee. But he rejected the view that it would ad to the labor board's powers to fragment national bargaining units, saying the board already has this power.

The Canadian Labor Congress opposes it vigorously on the grounds it would open the way for the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions to take over some Quebec workers who now belong to national bargaining units.

Mr. Mackasey, a native of Quebec City and onetime amateur boxer, entered the Commons in 1962 after serving as president of a sporting goods manufacturing company and as an alderman in Verdun.

Fluently bilingual, and representing a riding that is more than half French, Mr. Mackasey has been an outspoken critic of Quebec separatism and an advocate of extending bilingualism.

He has campaigned for what he calls a counter-offensive against separatism through stepped-up development of Quebec's poorer areas.

NDP, Grits Warming Up

Opposition parties officially open fire on Premier Bennett's budget Monday in the legislature but there have been some warm-up shots.

"The budget will allow us to run faster to remain in the same place," said Opposition Leader Robert Strachan.

He will lead off budget debate speeches Monday.

There is a "glaring gap" in the Premier's budget address where only passing mention is made of $400,000,000 worth of spending on Columbia River power projects, said Mr. Strachan.

Liberal Leader Ray Perrault said the budget is inadequate to prepare the province for the economic challenges ahead.

He said the premier's budget speech was marred by "unnecessary, wild, and intemperate" attacks on other levels of government.

$300,000 'Lost' By Welfare Hike

Mayor Hugh Stephen today agreed with a suggestion by Premier Bennett that B.C. Hydro reduce bus fares for older people by using some of the $1 million subsidy announced in the budget Friday.

". . . And I hope it will go to help our elderly citizens," the premier said in the legislature.

"So do I," the mayor said this morning.

"I hope this is an indication the premier will never force municipalities or regional districts to take over the buses. I expect Hydro will use it to improve its own balance sheet for borrowing."

PAY 20 PER CENT

Victoria and Saanich will gain about $500,000 each in increased per capita grants but this will be reduced to about $200,000 with local government paying 20 per cent instead of 10 per cent of social assistance and the loss of certain highway grants.

Concern was expressed in both municipalities that doubling the local share of social assistance will prove a financial liability while per capita grants are fixed.

"I'm afraid we have got a fixed grant against a rising and unknown commitment," said Mayor Stephen.

Reeve Hugh Curtis of Saanich agreed and added "don't forget that per capita grants are given at the whim of the government. We have been trying to regularize this for years but without success."

Esquimalt Reeve Ray Bryant said increasing the 10 per cent share to 20 per cent "only confirms the opinion of a good many people that the provincial government is in worse financial shape than the premier cares to admit."

St. Valentine's Dance Wednesday

There will be a St. Valentine's Dance Wednesday from 2 to 4 p.m. and the stamp club will meet on Thursday at 2 p.m.

Biggest Profit In 55 Years

The government-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway made the biggest profit in its 55-year history in 1967, Premier Bennett said in his budget speech Friday.

The premier said the PGE made a net profit of $595,322 after all costs including interest and depreciation. It made an operating profit of $8,855,831 on revenue of $24,360,265.

It is estimated that carloadings in 1968 will increase by nearly 7,000 carrying a total of 3,831,000 tons of freight.

FARMER

'DEAL PUSHED' BY GAGLARDI

KAMLOOPS (CP)—Highways Minister Gaglardi urged approval of the controversial Del Cielo Heights development near this Okanagan city at two closed city council meetings last fall, former deputy mayor Jack Chilton said Friday.

He said the minister's two sons, Bob and Bill, were also present at both meetings as employees of the project.

Mr. Gaglardi has been accused by Alex Macdonald (NDP Vancouver East) of acting improperly in the affair because he was an executor of the estate that sold the land to the developers while he was in a position to grant highway access.

Mr. Chilton said in an interview Mr. Gaglardi told the second meeting that council's opposition to the project was an interference with free enterprise.

Council had unanimously opposed the Del Cielo development after a public hearing.

Mr. Chilton said nothing was decided at the council meetings, but another meeting was held after he was no longer a council member.

'Show-Case Negroes' Get Jobs in U.S. Firms

"What they want of course is a show-case Negro — everyone must have one," James Farmer told students at the University of Victoria Friday.

The national director of the Congress of Racial Equality in the U.S. was given a standing ovation by more than 300 students in a noon-hour address on "The Black Revolution."

The plight of the average American Negro has been unchanged by recent civil rights victories, he said.

For every university graduate who gets a job a hundred are run out the back door—displaced by automation.

"We've been running up a down escalator. There's more segregation now than there was before we started. There's more residential segregation—for example the black ghettoes of Seattle and Spokane."

The Negro's role as a soldier fighting Hitler's master race theory in the Second World War was one of many factors producing his new mood, said Mr. Farmer.

He had accepted second class citizenship for almost 100 years before then because he knew of no alternative.

But Negro youth today is rejecting the American system and seeking an answer in violence.

Was Bennett Born 60 Years Late?

Mika

W. A. C. Bennett was a six-year-old farm boy in New Brunswick — and British Columbia was a callow 35-year-old province when the 1906 dominion; provincial conference was called by Sir Wilfrid Laurier to hash over the state of Confederation.

In 1968 it became obvious that the province had grown up and the question has become, will Mr. Bennett?

B.C. sent its great premier Sir Richard McBride—a master political strategist who pulled the province out of deep debt into booming prosperity—to that 1906 conference.

He put on a great battle for what he called "better terms" for B.C. and defined them as higher federal subsidies to the province. Sir Wilfrid offered a sizable (in those years) $1 million increase in the B.C. subsidy.

"All British Columbia endorsed his action.

"At Vancouver and New Westminster, 'immense crowds manifested every token of joy'.

"In Victoria, popular demonstrations at the boat, on the street and at a public meeting, assured him that no course could have been more popular in a province which had an old tradition of 'fighting Ottawa'.

"By breaking the honorable peace which had prevailed since the mid-eighties he had diverted attention from conduct which many considered highly irregular and censurable."

Well, history tells us, Sir Richard used his moment of glory to call a snap election that gave his Conservative government a landslide a few months later.

This undoubtedly was in T. D. (Duff) Pattullo's mind when he represented the province at the Dominion-provincial in 1940 which convened in Ottawa to discuss the Rowell-Sirois report on federal-provincial fiscal relations.

Premier Patullo, along with two other provincial premiers, attacked the report's recommendations that would have enabled Ottawa to increase its fiscal strength for prosecuting the war effort.

He decried it as an effort by the "centralists" to weaken B.C. and earned himself the description as a "conference wrecker." Home he came to his anticipated reward and was shocked to find the province against him.

"Soon he found himself in a position where only two organizations, both of which he thoroughly disliked, the New Democracy Committee and the Social Credit League, were giving him public support," says Dr. Ormsby.

A year later he called a provincial election, lost seats heavily and soon was no longer premier.

Mr. Bennett must have been among those who always considered Premier Pattullo's downfall as the temporary circumstance of a world war persuading British Columbians that they were Canadians first.

Certainly he seemed to act on that basis at the constitutional conference this week when he told Ottawa and the country that the only thing wrong with Confederation was the lack of special subsidies for B.C. to help meet the higher costs of building roads and services in mountainous terrain.

How painful a moment it must have been this week when, re-entering the legislative chamber after having fought the good fight against Ottawa, he found a bare half-dozen of the Socreds bothered to applaud him while the rest of his party and the opposition studiously ignored him.

There is no world war atmosphere to blame this time.

Only a misreading of history and the mood of this province could account for his cold reception.

B.C. soon will celebrate its 100th year as a province of the world's second largest country.

That makes it older than Mr. Bennett and perhaps very much wiser—at least mature enough not to be titillated any longer by a juvenile's bumptious quarrel over pennies at the edge of a national abyss.

Socreds Pound 102 Rounds Of Thumping

By BRUCE YEMEN

Premier Bennett was given a 35-second desk-thumping Socred ovation at the end of his budget speech of just under two hours.

The Socred MLAs, wearing the traditional white party flower, gave the loudest individual applause for the premier's announcement of a $1,000 new home acquisition grant and for a $25 per-capita grant to municipalities.

He was heckled mildly and infrequently during the 16,000 word speech which attracted fewer than usual guests who usually sit in the chamber behind government and opposition benches.

The premier deviated from his advance text on a few occasions, usually to snap back at a heckler, and proclaim the benefits of Social Credit government over liberal and socialist government.

DOWN RIVER

At one point he said, "In my opinion the Liberal Party would sell this province right down the river."

When Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) greeted the premier's announcement of the province's contingent liabilities nearing $2 billion with the comment, "That's quite a debt," Mr. Bennett said heatedly:

"It's a great investment that brought great results in employment . . . In spite of all the unfair criticism . . . this is the reason why we lead all Canada today."

The B.C. Hydro debt is included in the contingent liabilities.

The premier added a hope that hydro would make use of its new $1,000,000 bus subsidy to reduce fares for old-age pensioners.

He said there would be no "holdback" on the Glendale treatment centre for retarded children in Saanich.

He also urged members to encourage local government to play a stronger role.

"We've got to get more of our people interested in our democracy," he said. "Our best government is at the local level."

The premier read the speech quickly in a staccato style and was growing hoarse by the end. He sipped grapefruit juice for sustenance.

In the House

. . . And So It Goes

Macfarlane: "A rose by any other name is still a debt."

Bennett, after an opposition reference to the white-and-green hyacinth worn by the Socreds: "Green for growth and white for purity!"

Bennett: "This type of opposition has got to say something . . . If only they knew how to say goodbye."

Bennett: "I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that to the National Government, British Columbia is a goblet to be drained."

BENNETT EYES MACKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Northern Development Minister Laing told the Commons Friday that Premier Bennett still is looking northwards — but at the Mackenzie district of the Northwest Territories and not the Yukon.

Mr. Laing said the premier expressed interest in obtaining some economic interest in the Mackenzie during this week's federal-provincial conference on the constitution.

Mr. Laing said he suggested that British Columbia might join with Alberta in some N.W.T. venture.

WILSON

$1 Million Boost Pleases Chancellor

Chancellor R. B. Wilson of the University of Victoria Friday welcomed an increase in Uvic's capital grant from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.

"We can certainly use an extra million with 700 more students expected this fall," he said.

But he expressed concern that Uvic be treated as fairly as Simon Fraser University which he said is expecting only 200 new students in the fall.

Estimates tabled in the legislature Friday showed Simon Fraser's capital grant would jump from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 and University of British Columbia's from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000.

Operating grants for the three universities are to be boosted $8,000,000 to $53,000,000 but distribution of the increase was not announced.

Dr. Patrick McTaggart Cowan, Simon Fraser president, said he was pleasantly surprised by the capital grant increase but said the operating grants looked "critically lean."

Income Tax Major Source

Income tax, as usual, will provide the largest single increase in revenues anticipated by Premier Bennett's budget.

Estimates tabled Friday showed that personal income tax receipts are expected to jump $31 million to a total of $154 million in the coming fiscal year while corporation income taxes are expected to rise $12 million to a total of $67 million.

The 5 per cent sales tax will bring in $17 milion more at $167 million while the gasoline tax should increase $6.3 million.

Liquor profits will jump $7.5 million to $50.5 million Mr. Bennett predicted and he added $21 million in anticipated ferry revenues under the new set up incorporating the fleet in the highways department and labelling its income as "contributions from government enterprises."

RESOURCES HIT

Motor vehicle licences should bring in $31 million, a boost of $2 million, and the revenue from insurance premiums tax is expected to rise $1 million to $5.5 million.

The estimates predicted increases in some resource revenues: $1.4 million more in mining tax, $1.7 million more in logging tax, and $6 million more from coal, gas and oil leases at a total of $40 million.

But other resource revenues are expected to drop.

Land taxes on forest land, timberland, tree-farm land and the E & N Railway Belt Lands are expected to be cut almost in half for a total of $2.4 million.

And timber sales are expected to decline by $1.5 million to a level of $42 million.

Both the federal and municipal government levels will more than offset these reductions.

The federal share of joint service programs will rise $10 million to a total of $115 million and B.C. municipalities will be expected to contribute $10.2 million to joint-shared programs instead of this year's $6.5 million.

Bigger Figure

ONCE AGAIN PREMIER BENnett has produced what he terms a budget of "restraint", and revealed the largest annual expenditures — $886 millions — and the greatest debt — more than $1.9 billions — in British Columbia's history. The expenditure total in large part reflects the growth of the province in population and in governmental and industrial activity. The debt is contingent — an indirect liability of the provincial government rather than a direct one — but nonetheless a responsibility of the people, as the financiers to whom Mr. Bennett applies for loans well recognize.

Mr. Bennett rejects any suggestion that his financial operations are inflationary — inflation is caused by governmental deficits, he says, and British Columbia does not have them. Yet inflation, with or without deficits, is brought on by a demand for goods exceeding the supply, and this government has been a major demander of goods in the course of its operations. Mr. Bennett himself recognized this in his anti-inflationary deferment of work on part of the museum and on other projects.

While grants to the hard-pressed local governments have been increased, among others, there is a disturbing re-emphasis of the politically oriented person-to-person financing which is Mr. Bennett's specialty. The home-owners' grant has been increased to $130, creating a greater dependency than ever for those whose property taxes are thereby decreased; and the handout to the homebuilders has been raised to an unprecedented $1,000.

Although per capita grants to municipalities have been generally augmented, the additional revenue from them is matched in part by specific requirements for its use, and by new responsibilities which will take up at least half of the increment. There is no indication of the overall joint study of municipal financing which has so long been requested and is so obviously needed.

The higher tax levies on logging and mining will be welcomed by the public, providing they do not force costs to a point which inhibits export sales. The current giant deal for export of British Columbia coal to Japan, for instance, has roused some public questions as to just what benefit the province will derive from it. Taxation of output is a source of public revenue from natural resources which has not always been fully exploited.

Emphasis on education and social welfare is continued in this budget in what is termed the "human betterment" category but there is no promise that appropriations will in any way equal the full needs of the universities or the local school boards, particularly in view of the expected surging increases in enrolment. Increased health appropriations, including those for hospital construction and operation, are also a recognition that the needs are growing, but most hospital boards will agree that the government is still working on requirements of several years ago rather than of today and tomorrow.

It is intriguing that Mr. Bennett persists in his custom of comparing his current budget figures in every case with those of 1951/52, the last year of pre-Bennett government. Such a comparison has no significance now except political, for inflation and the vastly larger requirements of today have changed the whole basis of relationship. But the references appear in each budget, as though to say: see how much more we are doing for you than the other governments did. The analogy is not applicable, unless two other comparisons are also made: taxes and debt. On those disclosures Mr. Bennett is less insistent.

Problems of Have-Nots—and Haves

WHEN THE UNITED NAtions eight years ago initiated what was called the "development decade," a target of five per cent annual economic growth was set for the under-developed nations. With the exception of a very few countries heavily subsidized by the United States—Taiwan and South Korea are examples—the target has not nearly been reached.

Last week at the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development in New Delhi, Mr. Raul Prebisch, an eminent Argentinian economist and secretary-general of the group, stated that even if the five per cent growth rate had been achieved, it would still not have been enough to turn the tide in most of the under-developed world. What is needed, he declared, is a "massive mobilization" of the resources of the wealthy nations to provide capital investment in the poorer countries. Particularly urgent, he said, was provision of jobs for the millions of people who are being driven off the land by modern agricultural technology and are flocking to the slums of the larger cities.

Mr. Prebisch admitted that he had little hope of immediate action on increased capital investment because of the balance-of-payments problems in the major industrial countries. But he asked for at least a commitment, a program with a definite timetable, on three major points: tariff concessions on products of under-developed countries, negotiations for higher prices for basic commodities which make up the bulk of their export earnings, and a new World Bank fund to bolster countries whose foreign exchange earnings fall below designated levels.

Most of the wealthier countries have agreed in principle to the first proposal, but considering some of the difficulties involved in implementing the tariff cuts negotiated during the Kennedy Round it may be some time before the under-developed countries get any help in this manner. The other two suggestions made by Mr. Prebisch seem to have little hope of succeeding. To the extent that the developed countries still need the products of the poorer countries — that is, where substitutes have not been found, as is the case with rubber and to a growing extent sugar — they will continue to demand the lowest possible prices. As for any system of further World Bank credits, this seems doomed as well so long as the balance of payments problems persist.

The New Delhi conference will go on for several more weeks with the delegates attempting to make plans for revitalizing the economies of the countries of the under-developed world. There is little which can be done, however, without the firm commitment of the wealthy nations and there seems to be as little hope of gaining that now as there was four years ago when the first such conference was held.

Up the Ladder

CONSIDERABLE LOCAL pride is involved in the announcement that Dr. William Petrie, a native of Victoria, has been appointed chief of Canada's Defence Research Board staff in London, England. Dr. Petrie was educated in Victoria schools, studied at the University of B.C. and Harvard, and has attained international respect as a physicist. Recently he has served as deputy to the position he now takes over in concrete recognition of abilities which were also shared by his brother, the late Dr. Robert Petrie, another local product who was widely renowned as Dominion astronomer.

Rebel's Thanks

I want to thank all the people who have written and phoned me regarding my retirement (so well reported in the Victoria Times, Feb. 3, page 14).

What I shall miss most is the friendliness and hospitality of the people along my sightseeing route. I have always had their permission to take my guests into their gardens and show them the lovely flowers they grow.

We can talk all we like about Victoria being a modern city with high-rises and what not, but — let's face it — Victoria is famous as a city of homes and gardens.

Let's keep it that way!—George (Rebel) Mowat, 1551 Burton.

Unfair Picture

In the magazine section of the Daily Times dated February 3, 1968, appeared an article on the St. John's School for Boys.

I would like to place my objection to the publication of this article. It certainly did not represent any of the fine accomplishments of the school.

Since the paper has published the article now, surely someone will be gracious enough to retract this unfair picture and outline the better and higher standards that the school aims to maintain.—Catherine M. Speirs (Miss), 1035 Belmont.

A Look at Canada's Momentous Three-Day Conference

Western

THE most important result of the three day constitutional meeting—not less significant because it was generally expected—is that the eleven governments, through their premiers, have enlisted for the duration. What was done this week was prelude; the conference has merely adjourned and from time to time will meet again to deal with reports from ministerial or official committees. There is no thought anywhere that they will be out of the negotiating trenches by Christmas. A tired prime minister remarked afterwards that the meeting had left him more conscious than ever of the difficulties involved in constitutional revision. This, in fact, was apparent in the long struggle to achieve a consensus on the single issue of linguistic rights.

In summing up at a press conference, Mr. Pearson said that the meeting had achieved "all we could reasonably expect." There had, however, been a considerable effort to achieve more. The supposed five paragraph consensus of Tuesday ran into objections on Wednesday morning serious enough to require revision for the afternoon session. But even the revised version encountered so many reservations from so many quarters that Mr. Pearson had to settle in the end for three paragraphs which said a good deal less. The British Columbia delegation, in Mr. Bennett's absence, was reluctant to accept even this.

What was plainly hoped of the meeting was agreement on a set of principles going beyond any previous accord. It would then have been for committees to work out the details or methods of implementation. In particular, the federal government wanted approval for a declaration of linguistic equality; acceptance of its general plan for constitutional amendments guaranteeing rights, which would find progressive application across Canada; and a commitment to consider the consolidation of constitutional guarantees in a charter of human rights when that has been agreed upon.

The declaration of equality came through unscratched. It now read: "Recognition . . . that, as proposed by the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism and as a matter of equity, French-speaking Canadians outside of Quebec should have the same rights as English-speaking Canadians in Quebec."

Obvious Reason

The reference to B and B was included on the insistence of Mr. Bennett for the obvious reason that the report scarcely touches British Columbia. There was accordingly rather general astonishment when the B.C. delegation at the last moment threatened to draw back even from this proposal.

On the other hand Mr. Pearson could not overcome the objections to constitutional guarantees by stages. Neither could he secure so much as a mention of the human rights charter in the final three-point consensus.

Although it was Mr. Manning who opened the attack on the scheme of constitutional amendment by the method of "opting in," it was Mr. Maxwell Cohen, speaking for New Brunswick, who drove it home. He voiced a variety of objections but in particular backed Mr. Manning's contention that, in the light of Section 91 (1) and established conventions, an amendment involving linguistic rights would require the unanimous consent of the provinces.

This was a rather surprising development since Mr. Robichaud of New Brunswick is one of the most ardent proponents of linguistic equality. But it appears that at least five provinces have serious doubts about "opting in." The worries of some premiers, most clearly articulated by Mr. Manning and Mr. Bennett, go beyond this mechanism. They have yet to be convinced (as presumably do those who have reserved their positions that the objectives of the Royal Commission would be best served through constitutional guarantees.

Mr. Johnson, always unpredictable, made his own contribution to a scene of confusion. It has been evident from the first that in his mind B and B, however attractive, takes second place to the question of power. His position on Wednesday was that, with the spread of enlightenment and the avowed good intentions of his brother premiers, the rights of French Canadians outside Quebec have been in less danger. Thus there can be no urgency about Mr. Trudeau's project and it would be unfortunate if the conference (or worse, the federal government, sought to impose its will on reluctant provinces.

Minority Rights

In addition, Mr. Johnson expressed some fears about "mathematical bilingualism," sensing a danger that the result might be to detract from the rights of the English minority in Quebec. It was to meet this objection that the call for government action in paragraph two of the consensus carried the qualifications, "without diminishing existing rights, recognized by law or usage."

This being the official Quebec view, critics of the B and B report are presumably absolved from any suspicion that they are thereby anti-Quebec.

Although Mr. Trudeau has been checked, it does not follow that he has been defeated. Mr. Manning, the most thoughtful critic among the premiers, rested his case essentially on the argument that the conference ought not to prejudge these issues but should refer them to the special committee. Within this committee, it is to be assumed, the conference debate will be re-opened; initially, perhaps, by expert advisers.

Flash Points

The three-day meeting, although it had its flash points and must have been in some ways disappointing to the federal negotiators, ended in an atmosphere of general goodwill. What effect will it have in ensuing months on the political tensions which have racked Canada? Presumably it will have no effect at all on the separatists who are interested, not in reforming federalism but in ending it. But the other parties to the debate have now bound themselves to a common venture which must last many months. It would doubtless be unrealistic to suppose that the issues have been shunted (as so often through royal commissions) into cold storage. Nevertheless a commitment to negotiate over an almost unrestricted field removes any immediate justification for open political warfare with the rapiers of constitutional argument.

Some reduction of tension seems therefore likely. But there are at least two qualifications. One is that in Quebec, as Mr. Johnson noted, the question of rights is the traditional stuff of politics — and there are no closed seasons on politics in the province of Quebec. The other is that the separatists are dangerous and neither major party would dare to leave them with a free field.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

A Time for Saigon to Clear the Decks

Frye

EAGERNESS to punish Communist savagery in Vietnam with some form of military escalation has been one of the more conspicuous by-products of the enemy's "winter offensive." What is more directly relevant, however, is the need to escalate the political war — and to that end, to bring new and greatly intensified pressure on Saigon to co-operate.

The political war—the effort to win spontaneous and meaningful support from the population — is going very badly indeed.

Two weeks of Viet Cong attacks on major cities and provincial capitals have succeeded in their minimum objective. They have left a great many previously secure people terrified, unsure of the government's ability to protect them, and therefore extremely hesitant to take an anti-Communist stand.

One of the axioms of anti-guerrilla warfare is that voluntary support from the populace is essential to success. The guerrillas must be denied supplies, shelter and information.

Afraid to Help

Perhaps a great many South Vietnamese civilians would help Saigon if they dared. Vice President Ky's announcement this past week that arms would be distributed to loyal citizens may be a step in that direction.

But the real necessity is for Saigon to project a genuine, all-out will to win, a persuasive concern for the people's needs, and a sense of universal burden-sharing.

On all these scores the government in Saigon has fallen critically short.

It has yet to draft all its available manpower. Food and supplies desperately needed by women and children who have been driven from their homes are still being funneled into the black market to enrich a few.

Brutal counter-terrorist tactics, careless of civilian life, come close at times to matching Communist savagery and do not contribute to winning popular support.

Perhaps most serious of all, Saigon has denied the people hope of a peaceful settlement on any terms remotely attainable at this tage.

In response to peace feelers from Hanoi last December, Saigon became rigidly unyielding, ruling out the only visible forms of potential compromise — even coalition with non-Communist rebels — and harassing the United States when Washington sought to feel out the possibilities.

In effect, Saigon insisted that the war go on until the Reds agreed to perpetuate the present military regime indefinitely in power.

The Communists' "winter offensive" has been a form of reply. The Reds have demonstrated that Saigon's military power and political prestige are by no means commensurate with its bargaining stance.

The South Vietnamese posture — on the one hand refusing, in effect, to make peace, and on the other, withholding full commitment to the war — is, or should be, utterly intolerable to the United States.

There are at least four major things that Saigon should be required to do:

1. The South Vietnamese armed forces should be placed under American command. Some of its units now fight bravely and well, but too many are incompetently led, battle-shy and ineffectual.
2. South Vietnam should be fully mobilized for war. Anything less than an all-out effort is just not enough.
3. The corruption which has had such a disintegrating effect on the army and civil service must be ruthlessly rooted out.
4. A realistic approach to peace must be agreed to, including provision for free participation in the post-war political process by all law-abiding elements.

It is not an easy thing to do to twist Saigon's arm, given its pride, its abhorrence of a puppet posture and its need to command the respect of its people.

But the sources of leverage available to the United States are very considerable, and need not be inadequate even to such an ambitious program as this. They can be applied discreetly.

Evacuation Threat

The reasons why they have not been fully applied in the past are first, that the ultimate lever—an American threat to pull out — is not easily available, and might not be credible, if used; and second, that encouragement of independence for Saigon is consistent with, and helps to advance the American objective of self-determination for South Vietnam.

No inhibitions should be overriding, however, if the political war, and hence the military war, cannot be won while they are accepted.

The bare-faced truth is that the South Vietnamese are not yet ready for full self-determination. The pretence that they are ready is a political luxury to be indulged when conditions permit. They do not now permit.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Those who ramble around the byroads and hike the trails and woods often catch a scent that stimulates curiosity.

Smells are sometimes difficult to identify by man, who does not have to rely upon them as many other animals do.

If you pass by some of the northern cottonwoods there will be odor of balm-of-giliad. Just pinch a bud and it will give delight and is not easily forgotten.

The balsam fir has its own particular odor and even in the winter delights those who use it as a Christmas tree.

Sometimes, as you wander in the bush, you pick up a rather fetid smell. Look around. It possibly will come from some decaying mushroom, which attracts certain insects, providing a place where they can lay their eggs and so perpetuate their species.

The dense forest, where the forest floor is thick with fallen needles and twigs, will give off a dank smell. Each type of forest will give its own particular odor.

Travel by the marsh lands. Here again there will be a different smell. Within the marsh areas you will pick up many kinds of odors.

Perhaps you will pass by an old stump or log where a coon has left his "calling card."

The whiff of pipe tobacco will tell you that you are not alone in the forest, or maybe you will catch the smell of a wood fire. If you are acquainted with the odors given off by each type of wood you can tell what is being burned. Perhaps the most delightful of these is the smell of burning willow.

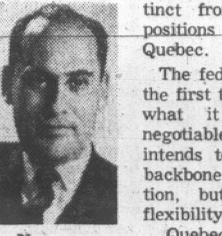
Then, if the wind is in certain directions, you will pick up the smell of rotten eggs. This will be from a pulp mill.

Process of Remaking A Nation Has Started

By PETER C. NEWMAN

The cataract of news coverage of this week's constitutional conference partly obscured its most significant aspect: that a fundamental re-arrangement in the life of this nation is now underway and nothing can stop it.

Deep historical and psychological tides are carrying us into uncharted territory as the old political and moral orders crumble and a wholly new alignment of social forces takes their place. The quality of Canadian life, our values, expectations and perceptions are undergoing a radical change. The consensus of 1967, which first brought us together, no longer prevails. It was based on a world now vanished forever, and Messrs. Bennett and Manning notwithstanding, a new kind of Canada is being born.



Newman

Consider one example. It was less than five years ago, on July 8, 1963, that George McIlraith, the then minister of transport, rose in the House of Commons to explain that the name of Trans-Canada Airlines could not be changed to Air Canada.

The reason he gave, which was accepted without comment, was that the cost of repainting the aircraft fuselages was too high. But everyone knew that the real cause for the government's hesitation was that giving the national airline a new French-sounding name might produce serious resentment in English-Canada.

Now Equality

Now, only 55 months later, the 11 heads of Canada's governments have reached agreement for linguistic equality across the nation and for what amounts to the eventual re-drafting of the British North America Act to take Quebec's aspirations more directly into account—all with the general approbation of English Canada.

It's not that the constitutional conference conclusively solved any problems, but it started the process of remaking the nation.

The tough confrontations remain to be faced. The television coverage of the meetings made it obvious that the stand-pat postures of the B.C. and Alberta premiers have become irrelevant — and maybe even absurd. Bennett and Manning — and the opinions they represent — can make the revising process more difficult but they will not be able to stop it.

Probably the best approach to analyzing the conference's achievements and failures is to regard it as an international United Nations type gathering, convened to reach some kind of consensus between warring states.

The first stage in such a negotiation, the prerequisite to any agreement, is the establishment of a plateau of confidence on which solutions can be negotiated. This is exactly what the conference brought about. It established the machinery that can work out the answers. It did not produce any of the answers themselves.

The other major contribution of the conference was to crystallize the true—as distinct from the advertised—positions of both Ottawa and Quebec.

The federal government, for the first time, outlined exactly what it considers to be negotiable and what powers it intends to retain. There was backbone in the federal position, but also a sense of flexibility and fair play.

Quebec also made its demands much clearer than ever before. Now we know what kind of special status would be required to fulfill Daniel Johnson's pledge of "equality" for his province that he has always claimed was the only alternative to independence.

Most important, perhaps the Quebec premier's dismissal of the importance of entrenching linguistic rights outside his province demonstrated that his real concern is not so much the preservation of the French culture in the country at large as with significant additions to the powers of his own government.

New Meaning

The great debate on French-English relations thus takes on a new dimension. Can the citizens of Quebec be represented in any meaningful way by their federal MPs if the jurisdictions demanded in the Johnson brief are granted? Or will the views of Pierre Trudeau prevail, allowing the so-called French-Canadian "nation" to flourish in every part of the country, undermining the excuse for Quebec to be granted special powers?

The intransigence of the Alberta and British Columbia governments is the main stumbling block to Prime Minister Pearson's ingenious formula for an "opting in" amendment to the constitution on linguistic rights.

While neither province would have to pass enabling legislation to make the new bilingual laws apply within its jurisdictions, the amendment itself would require unanimous consent.

"To my mind," says constitutional expert Dr. Eugene Forsey, "the really crucial thing is the setting up of the machinery to make a careful joint study of the actual question of the division of powers. This will probably be whittled down to something we can all accept.

Get to Specifics

"I've always taken the position that there can be no substantial diminution of the powers of the central government, but that we should be willing to look at anything and discuss anything, examine anything, to see exactly what it might mean. We've got to get down to specifics.

"What Daniel Johnson has been doing up to now is talking in large terms which might mean anything from peanuts to half the world. If you get down to a clause-by-clause examination of the constitution, then he's going to have to put up or shut up. This is absolutely what must happen—the clause-by-clause examination."

"I'm not scared of any one province having something the other provinces haven't. There is something of that sort already in existence for nearly every province in the country. That by itself doesn't worry me. What would worry me is any massive transfer of powers."

Canada's constitution in the past 100 years has adapted itself to an incredible variety of economic situations, including the tight centralization of the Second World War.

The new fathers of confederation will have to apply something close to constitutional genius to the design of an equally flexible document. What we saw this week was a promising beginning.

LSD-Chromosome 'Breakage' Found In Hospital Research

By NATE HASELTINE

WASHINGTON — Ten hippies, young women who became pregnant after or during "trips" on the mind-bending drug LSD, are under special care at George Washington University hospital here.

Two of the ten have already given birth to infants whose bodies showed broken chromosomes. A third lost her deformed fetus at the 7th week after its conception.

The status of the special study was outlined at a staff meeting for hospital obstetricians and gynecologists by Dr. Cecil B. Jacobson, a geneticist, Macy Faculty fellow and clinical instructor at the medical centre.

Despite their broken chromosomes, found in a great variety of their body cells, Jacobson said, the infants showed no structural defects after the first three months of life. Both have been adopted and their adoptive parents informed about the circumstances.

In contrast, the 7-week-old fetus had an encephalocele, a central nervous system defect, a herniation of the brain through a congenital opening in the unclosed cranium.

The study plan at George Washington calls for selecting patients in five categories according to the following priorities:

Five Types

(1) Patients who are pregnant and used LSD before their conceptions; (2) Pregnant patients who used LSD during pregnancy; (3) LSD-using fathers of babies with no maternal exposure to the drug; (4) Fathers of babies with some maternal exposure to LSD; (5) Females with exposure who are planning to become pregnant.

The study protocol consists of screening of patients for history and clinical conformation of LSD exposure. Blood tests are made to determine if there is any chromosomal damage to either mother or father, or both. An attempt is to be made to obtain a sample of the LSD that was used, and to identify the father.

The latter two (getting samples and fathers) are most difficult, Jacobson explained, because of the difficulty of finding the fathers and the unwillingness of hippies to disclose sources of the illegal drugs that were used.

Besides blood samplings, skin biopsies are to be made of both parents if a cellular effect is found in the blood. Pre-natal evaluations and electrocardiograms will be made bi-monthly of the developing fetus. And at delivery of the child or its obortion, a series of many complicated tests will be made.

Beads of Life

Chomosomes are packets of genes, the hereditary beads of life which direct every phase of body development from the womb to the grave. For every broken chromosome, Jacobson said, perhaps a hundred genes are lost or caused to malfunction.

In the case of the two babies, studies showed they possessed the 'Philadelphia-L'' chromosome derailment. The same derangement shows up in persons in the final phase of humans with fatal myelogenous leukemia.

Jacobson said he expected that he and his colleagues will publish a full report by June, 1968, perhaps in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The staff meeting was open to the press to further publicize the hazards of LSD-taking.

In a previously reported case, Drs. Joseph Egozcue and Samuel Erwin, of the University of Oregon medical school, Portland, reported the first appearance of the "Philadelphia-L" chromosome disorder in the offspring of an LSD user. That baby had an inborn intestinal blockage. Another report of LSD on a hippie mother's baby showed the baby had an enormous skull, the two halves unclosed, and a double row of front teeth.

Young Radicals Threaten Old Order in Germany

By NEAL ASCHERSON

BERLIN — They fought, with blood and screams and thudding sticks, in church. The leader of the losing faction, his deep-set eyes glowing, raced to the pulpit and appealed: "Dear brothers and sisters . . .?"

Then vergers stormed after him up the stairs, and he leapt down from the pulpit into the nave, where an old man of the other party clubbed him with his crutch. Staggering to the door, the victim turned to smear his own blood over the face of a pursuing sexton and cry, "Servant of the Devil!"

This is not a scene from the German sixteenth century, from the wars of religion. It happened on Christmas Eve, in the Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church in West Berlin, as three girls tried to lay placards against the Vietnam war upon the altar steps.

As the congregation of peaceful burghers went on the instant berserk and fell upon them, the man who called vainly upon his "brothers and sisters" was a certain Rudi Dutschke, once a young Christian at Luckenwalde in the Mark Brandenburg and now leader of the new West German revolutionaries.

In the space of a year, this young man of 27 has become famous throughout Germany. To the middle classes, the established, the authorities, Dutschke is the embodiment of terror and dissension, intolerance and hate.

A Messiah

To the gathering army of students and young people who listen to him and follow him, he is the Messiah who will at last overthrow the ancient rule of family, state and capital over an unresisting nation.

The movement he helps to lead has many names and many facets, many prophets and now many battle honors. It is the "extra-parliamentary opposition," whose core is the fighting Left-Marxist Socialist Student League (SDS), whose teachers are the philosopher Herbert Marcuse, the dead insurgents Che Guevara of Cuba and Frantz Fanon of Algeria, the murdered Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg of Germany's failed revolution in 1918.

Their aim is so to provoke "pseudo-liberal" authority that its repressiveness will become clear to all, and "the conscious masses will intervene in history" to found a new revolutionary democracy without elites or bureaucracies.

It began three years ago in the Free University of West Berlin, with trouble over campus democracy between students and staff. In 1967 it escalated through countless political demonstrations to the riot of June 2, when the police ran wild and a student was shot dead.

Alarming

Today it has become a movement whose force and extremism is seriously alarming the rulers of West Germany. "We have the conscious masses in this city," Dutschke claims. "We have ten or fifteen thousand people who are developed and aware."

He denies his own supremacy. "There are many Dutschkes." In the SDS there can be no "chief ideologist" and no individual laying down party lines.

In a way, he is right. The press and television have seized on his personality and built him up into a national figure, ignoring the phalanx of devoted and intelligent men and women who stand beside him in the front rank.

But there is something about him — that overworked word "charisma," in truth — which has made him into a standard-bearer.

Short, with immensely broad shoulders, Dutschke at 27 already has silver threads in his cap of coarse black hair. His eyes have a dark blaze, and his chin usually has a three-day beard. He could be a Highland swordsman, coming down the hill at Culloden.

Terror, Hatred

These savage looks redouble the terror and hatred he inspires in the hearts of settled people. In fact, he is a studious young man, mild in his private manner. He does not drink or smoke. He still bears many traces of a long education in Protestant theology.

His attitude to the violence he provokes is impersonal. He speaks insistently and rapidly, in a high, crackling voice, burdening the hearer with intricate Socialist concepts. His influence comes less from his words than from his aura: incorruptibility of fanatic courage and utter conviction.

Brought up in East Germany — he crossed over only shortly before the Berlin Wall was built — Dutschke and his colleagues have little time for Soviet and East European Marxism. He wants "the masses" to be able to understand both "the treachery of Adenauer and the false Socialism of Ulbricht."

Both are power structures which resemble each other. The true revolution is that of the masses of the Third World, of the Algerians, the Cubans, the Vietnamese, even the Chinese.

The appearance of a doctrine like this in the solid, prosperous streets and fields of West Germany seems fantastic. It is none the less spreading through the West German universities and unsettling the political leaders of the nation.

They understand that, leaving Cuba and Rosa Luxemburg aside, this is the total opposition to the Bonn regime which has hitherto only played a part on the elderly Right Wing.

'Disastrous'

In his New Year message, President Luebke went at length into its meaning, as "opposition against the state and all authority, to tolerate this attitude could have disastrous consequences, as the end of the Weimar Republic showed."

The forming of the grand coalition, with its strengthening of state authority in many fields, and its emasculation of political opposition in Parliament, has now revived on Right and Left the resentful radicalism which West Germany's founders hoped never to experience again.

If there is a sound prediction for 1968 here, it is that Rudi Dutschke will enter prison in the next twelve months. The consequences of his "martyrdom," however, are unpredictable. The torrent of angry idealism he rode is not so easily to be stopped, and his physical removal could mean that his charisma — the sense of urgency, of blinding excitement he conveys — would grow faster than ever.

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

For Canada, this week's constitutional conference in Ottawa marked some kind of turning point in her history, but to most it was unclear in what direction or what impetus the next steps have been given.

Measured by its specific accomplishments, the conference was not very impressive. In more intangible ways, however, it was a success.

Probably its most significant feature was the opening of virtually all debate to the public through the press and television.

Many Canadians heard for the first time to the dialogue between the leaders of French Canada and English Canada.

By this exposure the question of national unity is given new meaning and urgency. It is doubtful that any future federal-provincial meetings dealing with matters of such magnitude will ever be held again as they have in the past behind closed doors.

If some of the debates were too complex to be understood by most, and the fine points of some of the political positions hard to fathom,, still the essence of the discussions was evident to all.

Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec represented the agressive movement in his province which has sparked the present crisis, while Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta emerged as the spokesman for the questioning, skeptical attitude of much of English Canada.

Manning, backed up by the less effective mugging antics of Newfoundland's Joey Smallwood and W. A. C. Bennett of B.C., was leery of both positions, particularly that of Johnson. He wanted to know specifically what Quebec is seeking before giving much ground on the language question.

In one of the ironies of the conference, however, Johnson and Manning ended by teaming up — for opposite reasons — to water down Trudeau's attempt to have the language rights guaranteed in a re-written constitution.

Instead the conference went on record as approving the principle of language rights, but leaving it up to the provinces to decide on the timing and means of implementation.

And in a typically Canadian solution to a ticklish problem, the conference agreed to set up a special committee to study the first report of the Royal Commission on biculturalism and bilingualism, which after four years of exhaustive study on the language question came up with some detailed recommendations.

Presumably the new committee will come up with some recommendation of its own based on the first recommendations and, who knows, that may require another committee . . .

Nevertheless, the conference participants all departed amicably with pledges to keep working together toward a solution and this must be regarded as a triumph of sorts for Prime Minister Pearson, who was the chairman.

If anyone finds it hard to take the question of language rights seriously, they had a reminder during the week from another nation how potent the issue can be.

As the debate was winding up in Ottawa, the coalition government of Belgium was forced to resign because of the lingering dispute between French-speaking and Flemish-speaking Belgians.

The latest crisis came over the use of French at Louvain University, where Flemish-speaking students and professors agitated militantly for a change to their tongue.

The cabinet of Premier Paul Van Den Boeynants was hopelessly divided on the issue, and he handed in his resignation to King Baudouin.

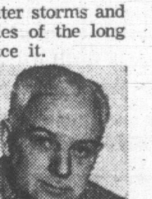
In the Far East, the Korean crisis continued to smoulder, as the U.S. and North Korea carried on talks at Panmunjom on the fate of the spy ship Pueblo and her 83 U.S. Navy crew members.

There were numerous reports that North Korea had agreed to release the men in exchange for a U.S. apology and admission that the Pueblo may have entered North Korean territorial water, but there was no official word by week's end.

More Urgent Things to Do Than Just Go Fishing, So—

By ART STOTT

In tones a thoughtful mother adopts to soothe a distraught child, the lady in our house has been offering me sympathy over the destruction of my boat ramp in the winter storms and the later removal by more gales of the long stringers I had rigged to replace it.



Stott

"It is frustrating," she said. "But, in the words of an old cigarette ad, nature in the raw is seldom mild. You've been hard done by. You can't launch your boat, and on the last couple of days the weather encouraged you to think that now was the time to go after the big winter springs.

"Still," she continued, "there's another way to look at this situation. It so happens that days good enough for fishing are also days good enough to get some of the work done around the place. Why not make a virtue of necessity and start early on the essential chores?

"It just happens that I have a small list of things requiring attention. When I clipped back the ivy from the retaining wall at the foot of the lawn the other day, I noticed that the stones were falling down. Only the ivy was holding the wall up. Since you can't go fishing at the moment, would you consider a little masonry work down there?"

"Certainly I'll consider it," I told her.

"And then," she went on, "have you noticed how the paint has cracked and peeled from the sash around the windows facing south? What would you say to scraping them down and then deciding what kind of surface you should give them? That calls for a little cogitation, If you use one variety of paint it blisters, cracks and peels away. If you use another, it washes down as it ages and the cream trim smears over the brown shingles. It calls for a little of the ingenuity you demonstrate so admirably."

"Of course I'll think about it," I said.

"After that," she continued, "you might figure what to do about the flicker that has been drumming his tattoo right at the top of the roof overhang. He's drilled his way completely through the boards, split off two shingles and made a hole big enough for sparrows or starlings to make nests under the roof covering. You'd better do something about that hole and that damn peckerwood."

"Don't talk dirty," I remonstrated.

"I apologize," she said. "It's just that I'm so aggravated by that bird. Maybe the job should be done by a specialist anyhow. The hole's close to 30 feet up in the air. You haven't a ladder long enough to reach it and I'm not so sure you're a competent aerialist anymore.

"Anyhow, there are other chores to which you might apply your talents. You have probably noticed that the winter greens we planted last year turned out green, but didn't provide any produce. The sprouts leafed but didn't sprout. The broccoli threw a couple of blossoms and they retired and the other stuff that is supposed to form a sort of cauliflower hasn't cauliflowered. Perhaps if you worked the ground now, putting in a little lime, a little kelp and some bone-meal or Blue Whale we'd have more success with our vegetables. And, as you remember after the last crop, we decided we'd prepare the soil and plant earlier this year.

"And what about the repairs we were going to make on the inside of the house — if the weather turns and isn't suitable for outdoor activity, do you think we might go ahead with that panelling job in the sunroom? Or perhaps fix up the basement the way we intended?"

The lady is right, of course. And what's the fun in fishing anyhow? You're lured out on the water because a spot of sunlight makes it sparkle — and you nigh on freeze to death. You run the risk of becoming a felon if your enthusiasm outpaces your arithmetic and you happen to bring in a grilse or two too many, or one that shrinks to less than 12 inches after you've boated it.

As far as those big winter springs are concerned, I often wonder if catching them isn't something like watching the Hindu rope trick — you hear about it from somebody who heard about it from another person who was told, and so on.

All of which leaves me speculating on how to go about putting a new boat ramp at the foot of my lot.

At 50,000 miles,
you may begin to wonder if your Mercedes-Benz 230S will ever rattle.

The Mercedes-Benz 230S rewards your investment with engineering advances, meticulous construction—and performance that puts most cars in its class to shame.

Its heavy-gauge steel "unit" body is welded at 10,000 points to squelch squeaks and rattles; hand-sanded and filed to smooth burrs and bumps away; coated top to bottom with primer, and slathered with 24 pounds of undercoating.

Instead of fads and gadgets, Mercedes-Benz engineers concentrated on technical advances—such as a fully independent suspension and husky front disc brakes. The 230S handles—and stops—more like a sports car than most family sedans. Rough road or smooth, you're always in precise control; it's a relaxing car to drive.

And the 230S is a pleasing car to own. No shabby workmanship, inside or out. And no infuriating nickel-and-dime repairs to keep it running right.

It makes sense to drive the Mercedes-Benz 230S instead of a status symbol. Come in and test-drive the 230S—and see for yourself.

SEARCHING LOOK AT THE POWER ELITE

'...And a Welcome Antidote to the Al Capp Mentality'

THE SMUG MINORITY, by Pierre Berton; McClelland and Stewart; 1968; 160 pp.; $5.95, cloth; $2.50, paper.

Richard J. Powers,

Political Science Department

University of Victoria

A Vancouver youth is offered the alternative of getting a haircut or spending a day in jail by a magistrate who exclaims: "I have a particular propensity against long hair."

A Toronto mayor proclaims: "Hard work and struggle built backbone and character in our parents. And the parents by denying this just right to their children in many cases produce weaklings and loafers."

The president of the Ontario Association of Mayors and Reeves told the annual meeting: "Perhaps I am old-fashioned, but as a kid I went to the proverbial red schoolhouse, walked one mile and a half and was happy it was heated with a pot-bellied stove. Today we are ruining our children, not with education but with the frills of education . . ."

Are these neanderthal notions and attitudes resurrected from some dark and best-forgotten past? No. These are the words of the Smug Minority, the term applied by Pierre Berton to today's power elite.

The smug minority are those self-satisfied, evangelizing, bed-rock God and capital Canadians who run our governments, businesses and labor unions, who set our standards, tell us what to eat, wear, spray on and think, and who, more or less, speak with one voice about the joys of work, the evils of leisure, the sanctity of property, the pernicious nature of welfare and other governmental subsidies which sap our vitality and destroy our initiative, and a myriad of other equally well-worn canards.

So What's Really Wrong With Leisure And Lots of It?

Pierre Berton has subjected these tired yet trusted adages to the scrutiny of a searching inquiry. He asks, for example, why it is that welfare payments (i.e., unearned money) are believed to be destructive of personal initiative while inheritances (also unearned) are not so regarded.

Is poverty, he wonders, more conducive to a healthy and determined outlook toward material success than the security of being financially well-off and able to afford higher education, which is nearly the exclusive province of the middle and upper classes?

A feature of interest is that he draws upon the work of University of Victoria Professor Gordon Bertram for the statistical data to substantiate that governmental support for higher education rather than being an expense, as commonly expressed, is in fact a capital investment which yields real dividends to the society.

It is one of Berton's essential theses that investment in human resources in the form of free higher education and subsidies for students who cannot afford otherwise to attend university is crucial to building anything that could fairly be termed a good society. He rejects, therefore, statistical references which place Canada near the top of the scale on standard of living indices while millions live at near or below subsistence levels.

Berton has called for a complete new approach to measuring societal achievement.

Leisure, he avers, is a better gauge than man hours spent in some degrading job which could be done better by machine if it needs doing at all.

Speech-Writers: Start Looking For Substitute Catch-Phrases

This is a plea for the society of Aristotle (without slavery, however) rather than the society of Calvin which obtains today.

The book is replete with examples and case histories gleaned from many diverse sources.

Berton is perhaps most effective when he employs the succinct illustration of some real case study; by personalizing the larger question of human deprivation he succeeds in engaging the reader's emotions. And this is an emotional book. It is fair, I think, to call it a polemic; but then this appears to be a case of fighting fire with same.

Mr. Berton succeeds in laying bare many of the illogical and inconsistent beliefs and platforms of Canadian life which tend to be both the creation and the servant of the specially privileged.

Even if widely read The Smug Minority is not likely to induce any real change in our attitudes and behavior (these having been inculcated for so long and so often) but it may cause a search among governmental and business speech writers for substitute maxims and catchphrases.

The work is not devoid of inconsistencies of its own, some of which Mr. Berton recognizes and some which he does not.

Two examples of the latter (both from the same page) will suffice.

Mr. Berton asserts, contrary to the demonstration of Marshall McLuhan, "that the techniques of an old medium are not the techniques of the new."

And he suggests that seeing Hamlet performed on the TV screen is more effective than reading it. But surely this depends on what purpose is involved; it is certainly not more effective as literature.

To conclude, the book is interesting, well-written, timely and socially awake.

It is not a landmark, but then few works are. In one respect Mr. Berton's concept of the evolution of social change presented as The Parade of Progress may indeed have application beyond its immediate purpose.

One could, for example, form a theory of history focussing on the position of certain personality types in the parade. The most important feature, in the short run at least, is that The Smug Minority is a welcome antidote to the Al Capp mentality which seems so pervasive in our world today.

BERTOLT BRECHT: HIS LIFE, HIS ART AND HIS TIMES by Frederic Ewen (New York, The Citadel Press, 1967) $10.00, in Canada $12.50, 575 pp.

R. T. K. Symington

He grew up in the Bavarian backwater of Augsburg. The 1920s — his twenties — he spent in the seething metropolis, Berlin, magnificent in its vitality and splendor, rotten with poverty, crime, corruption.

For Brecht it became a symbol of capitalism.

In 1928 Berlin bestowed fame upon him: The Three Penny Opera was really about Berlin, but that was overlooked because the songs were so good. Driven out of Germany in 1933, he wandered in exile through Austria, Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Russia — finally settling in the United States, where he lived from 1941 to 1947. In 1948 he returned to East Berlin, where he spent his last eight years.

BRECHT

This year will mark the 12th anniversary of Bertolt Brecht's death and with each year he seems to become more of an enigma.

He was an idealist, convinced of the basic truth of marxist philosophy; and yet he proved himself the cunning realist.

He settled after the war in East Berlin, but with an Austrian passport, a West German publisher and a Swiss bank account.

Nowhere in the West would he have been able to reunite all his collaborators from the 1920s in one theatre with a large budget — all this to found his kind of theatre: the Epic Theatre, later renamed Dialectic.

This is the enigmatic Brecht: If he really hated capitalist society so much, why did he in exile refuse an invitation to settle in Moscow, preferring to emigrate to the United States?

Fascinated by U.S.

Perhaps because America had for so long been fascinating for him — an exotic hell of concrete cities, gangsters, bars, loose women.

The reality was disappointing; he settled in Santa Monica, found little opportunity to make money (his English remained perfunctory) and was forced to do hack work for Hollywood:

Every morning, to earn my bread

Hopefully

I line up with the sellers.

The final blow was a summons to appear before the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Even this was not without irony. Having led the Committee and its lawyers around by the nose, Brecht was complimented on being an excellent witness! He left for Europe soon after.

His great plays — Mother Courage, Galileo, The Caucasian Chalk Circle — were written in exile; it is thus fitting that they have become a part of world repertory.

Ironically again, he came to embody his own portrait of Galileo: a man who sacrifices personal well-being for absolute truth.

How could he write: "Change the world, it needs it," and yet live under a tyrannical regime? How could he champion the rights of man, and yet watch in silence the subjugation of seventeen million people?

Dr. Ewen is the first North American to attempt an evaluation of Brecht and his works. The blurb — of course — describes the book as "definitive." The author does not live up to his publisher's image of him.

Inauspicious Start

He makes an inauspicious start: "The present work was undertaken with the object of presenting Brecht as a poet, playwright, theoretician of the drama, story-teller and thinker, and set him against the background of German and world history . . ."

This first sentence sets the stylistic tone of the whole book.

Dr. Ewen has clearly read all the right literature and met all the right people, but he has produced a hasty paste-job which has been rushed to press because the new twenty-volume edition of Brecht's works has already made this book out-of-date.

The author also fails to face up to the real questions: profuse quotations from Brecht's works do not replace interpretation.

Despite these failings the book does provide a service for North American readers; it will broaden their knowledge of a many-sided genius who possessed "that unique capacity ... for transmuting profound ideas into everyday common sense."

Life With Father

INTO THE WHIRLWIND, by Eugenia S. Ginzburg; Collins; $7.95; 331 pages (translated by Paul Stevenson and Manya Harari).

Readers of Svetlana Alliluyeva's Twenty Letters will have noticed her inability to cope with the terrors of her father's reign of fear.

All the horror of life in Stalin's concentration camps comes starkly to the fore in this books as Mrs. Ginzburg relates the events that led up to her eighteen year imprisonment and as she recalls the details of the first three of those years.

A sequel recounting the remaining years is due shortly.

Mrs. Ginzburg was, and still is, a dedicated Communist.

'Non-Act'

Her arrest at the beginning of the Stalinist purge reads like an Orwellian fantasy. She was accused of a non-act, her failure to denounce the editor of a book for which she wrote one chapter.

The editor was himself a prominent man in party circles, the type whom nobody would have dreamed of denouncing. But this failure to perceive "Trotskyist tendencies" was the beginning of the journey into the whirlwind of bureaucracy and fear.

The narrative is concise and undramatic.

The details speak for themselves and are in consequence quite hair raising in their revelation of the passionless cruelty of which ordinary humans are capable.

Through it all Mrs. Ginzburg retains her will to survive with her self-respect in tact. Stripped of her family and friends, an outcast with whom it is dangerous to associate, she never betrays her own values.

Salvation came with the Twentieth Party Congress and Khrushev's attack on Stalin. No matter what one's political convictions may be, this story is a triumph of human dignity.—A.W.J.

MYSTERY SHELF

The Recipe Is Clear Enough But the Flavor Disappoints

ACT OF FEAR, by Michael Collins. Dodd, Mead and Company, $4.75. WHO SAW MAGGIE BROWN?, by Kelley Roos. Dodd, Mead and Company, $4.75.

Reviewed by Burton Kurth

One does not necessarily demand interesting local color in murder mysteries, but when authors choose New York City for their scene, one does expect something of the special flavor of that metropolis to come through.

In the two mysteries under consideration, the City provides only a bland locale which might as well be Chicago, Los Angeles or any large American urban centre. Violence is the key to the action and, as we know, violence is all around us.

Plain Maggie

Who Saw Maggie Brown? concerns the more or less plausible kidnapping of a dazzling actress, Jessie Jones, who has sought the solace of anonymity as plain Maggie Brown.

In an otherwise sexless story, it is the persistence of her lover, sports columnist Nick Romano, that leads to the discovery of who did it and how.

Unfortunately, the streets and bars through which we gallop in some degree of suspense are all the same in colorless uniformity, and by the time we rescue Jones/Brown from imminent death, even the plot seems listless and insipid.

Marked for Same

Act of Fear is more interesting in some respects. Written originally as a short novelette for Manhunt Magazine, and expanded for this edition, it offers more than enough commentary on the problems of juvenile delinquency, search for identity, and keeping alive in the urban wasteland.

Yet it has a message with some element of truth to which one responds. It concerns a conflict of loyalties which is trite in a way, but which has a peculiarly North American quality.

The plot looks, through the eyes of a private detective, at the personality of an idealistic youth who has witnessed an underworld style murder and is marked for the same himself.

The fact that the youth is from a family involved in the rackets provides complications of both loyalty and fear.

The action works out for the best, as one might expect; it is the commentary in depth along the way by the cynical detective that provides the sociological substance.

The recipe is clear enough: work out an acceptable plot, then moralize — or even better, philosophize. Tell us what it all means — especially how to deal with violence. The locale nowadays is of minimal importance.

But What About West of Rockies?

THE FUR TRADE AND THE NORTHWEST TO 1857; by E. E. Rich; McClelland and Stewart 1967; 336 pp; $10.00.

Reviewed by R. H. Roy

Several years ago McClelland and Stewart undertook to publish the Canadian Centenary Series, which was to be a history of Canada in 17 volumes.

This present volume by Professor Rich of Cambridge University is one of the most recent and surely one of the best.

Dr. Rich begins his study with the establishment of the Hudson's Bay Company in 1670.

It is rather ironic that this very English company originated with the frustrated ambitions of two French-Canadian fur-traders, yet the competition it offered to the traders of New France had far reaching consequences.

For the first hundred years of its existence the Hudson's Bay Company sat on the rim of the Bay, content to encourage the natives to come to their forts where they would be assured of fair trade and fair treatment.

Why the Wait?

The French traders, despite the opposition of some officials, brought their trade to the Indians; and in so doing opened up new country until by the 1740s they had penetrated far into the Canadian West.

Considering the advantages of the Hudson's Bay Company's direct sea route into the centre of Canada, and also of the profits being reaped by the French traders who intercepted the flow of furs down to The Bay, why did the English company wait until 1774 before it established an inland fort?

Rich suggests two reasons —first, that the directors of the company failed to appreciate the need and second, that the Governor and Council found it difficult to find among its employees men who would volunteer to man the forts and accept the discipline exercised from London in the bargain.

On the Move

Far more dangerous to the profits of The Bay was the competition offered by the North West Company. These Pedlars from Quebec swarmed over the Northwest at an astonishing rate shortly after the defeat of the French in 1760.

In the search for prime beaver pelts Nor'westers such as Mackenzie, Fraser and Thompson extended the early discoveries of the French to the shores of the Pacific.

So intense was their competition that by about 1800 over two thirds of the fur trade was in their hands and the Hudson Bay Company was struggling for survival.

The peak of the competition between the two rivals was epitomized by the massacre of Seven Oaks.

The murder of Lord Selkirk's settlers accounted, in part, for the union of the two companies.

By this time the problem of settlement was a new factor which, in time, was going to force the great monopoly to yield to the demands of civilization and democratic government.

Disappointing

The limited amount of space Professor Rich gives to events west of the Rockies is disappointing.

Hardly any mention is made of the maritime fur trade, and although the consequences of the American settlement in Old Oregon are dealt with, one would wish for a closer look at settlement both there and later in Victoria.

These are minor points, perhaps, although one wonders if they will eventually be dealt with in later volumes. Professor Rich's scholarship is evident on every page, and his two decades' research into the Hudson's Bay Company records in London makes his comments and analysis all the more pertinent. I have never read a book on Western Canada in the period covered which is as excellent as this.

JOHN GOULT as Jason, Pamela O'Neill as Medea and Barbara Meiklejohn as the Nurse are featured in Robinson Jeffers' adaptation of Euripides' tragic drama, opening at Langham Court Theatre Feb. 17.

BY INTEGRATING his chorus as characters within the play, Euripides broke away from the conventional classic form of the detached obervers commenting on the action but not part of it. In Victoria Theatre Guild's Medea, which opens at Langham Court next Saturday, Michael Meiklejohn as the Tutor, and townsfolk Evanne Murray, Nora Kellie, Susan Belford and Sally Ann Jones, look on in appalled silence at the raging fury of the discarded wife.

GREAT GREEK TRAGEDY EXCITING CHALLENGE

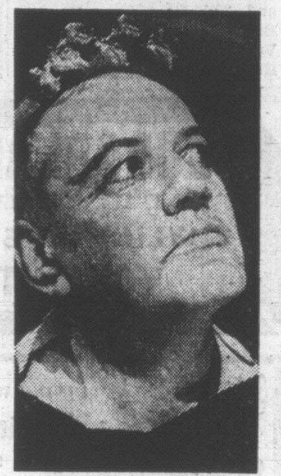
By AUDREY JOHNSON

Forty years is a long time for any arts organization to remain alive and active in a city where nature is too good to people, where inertia is bred in the bone and retirement is a chief occupation.

But this, when you take a close look at it, is the miraculous fact about the Victoria Theatre Guild.

It has sustained itself, without any outside help whatsoever, for very close to 40 years.

Now in the middle of its 38th season, the organization whose address for more than a quarter of a century has been 805 Langham Court, is more vigorous, more determined and has a clearer concept of its function and goals than ever before in its history.



DREAN
. . . as Creon

This season, motivated partly by external demand, but mostly through infusion of a new spirit within, the Guild has set its sights high as to quality of plays selected and standard of production.

The effect on members and on the public which has visited the theatre in the last few months, has been to generate a new enthusiasm.

Open Saturday

Currently in preparation and to be unwrapped next Saturday, is the most challenging and important play perhaps ever presented on the Langham Court Stage.

For many average theatre patrons, the idea of attending a performance of the great Greek tragedy, Medea, might suggest something less than an exciting evening's entertainment.

Possibly the thought of Greek tragedy conjurs up an impression of something too "highbrow" or "depressing?"

Nothing could be further from the truth, at least in regard to this particular play.

In the first place, Euripides, the original author, was of all Greek playwrights, the one whose work most clearly reveals the instincts of the born showman.

He delighted in effects for their theatrical value, apart from their relevance to the plot. He attacked the theatre of his time vigorously, brushing aside old conventions, causing innovations which are closely related to modern theatre concepts.

On top of which, 2,400 years later, along came 20th century American writer Robinson Jeffers, who made a free and immensely powerful adaptation of the Medea specifically for Judith Anderson, the notable American tragedienne.

High Level

It is this Medea—splendid in its flowing, often idiomatic English, intense and enthralling in mood and impact, the Media that swept Broadway audiences off their feet a few years ago—that is the choice of director Allan Purdy to continue the high level of entertainment provided by the Theatre Guild this season.

Pure theatrical entertainment from start to finish, Medea will be a particular thrill to those who like to be caught up and swept along in a tide of powerful emotions.

The story of Medea really begins before the play's opening when Jason in his search for the Golden Fleece, encounters Medea, a princess whose sorcery enables him to escape from the cave of serpents with the stolen Fleece.

Medea saves his life a second time when she slays her pursuing brother. She returns with Jason to Corinth where they are wed and she bears him two sons.

The play begins several years later when Jason, burning with ambition, renounces Medea to wed the young and beautiful daughter of King Creon.

Wild Revenge

When Creon pronounces her exile from Corinth, raging hatred of her perfidious husband and the searing flames of jealousy and humiliation drive her to a fantastic and inexorable revenge.

The method of her final destruction of Jason and his house and of Creon's daughter is undoubtedly one of the highest dramatic climaxes in the theatre of our time.

Ability to attract the best ot talent to his casts has stood firm for Allan Purdy in this instance.

He is particularly satisfied with newcomer to the Guild stage, Pamela O'Neill, whose arresting interpretation of the passionate Medea is one he feels certain will be enthusiastically received by Langham Court audiences.

Not less important are other principals—John Goult, tackling his first deeply emotional role as Jason. Mr. Goult and John Drean who appears as Creon, last played shoulder-to-shoulder with Mr. Purdy as the Knights in Murder in the Cathedral.

Mr. Drean is well known in Victoria for many fine portrayals. He has also designed —in collaboration with Denise Purdy—and made the costumes.

Broke Convention

Her husband, Michael, also widely experienced as both actor and director, is the tutor and Gem Hewlett, an award-winning Victoria character actor has the role of Aegus.

It was Euripides who broke down conventions that surrounded the stylized Greek chorus and in his plays involved all his performers directly in the plot.

The women of the village become, therefore, not simply emotionless commentators on the action, but must portray the effect of the action. They must, in short, be actors and not simply voices.

With that in mind, Mr. Purdy has cast his chorus from among the most experienced members or those with enough talent to compensate for less experience.

Medea's two children are played by Terry O'Neill and Rosalind Scott.

What the Theatre Guild has already pulled off this season is impressive.

Hobbyists Theatre

If it is apparent that the standard has been sustained when the curtains roll back next Saturday, the organization will have taken a gigantic step toward settling itself in a very special niche within the community. A niche which I will call for want of a pithier term—the Hobbyist's Theatre.

There is a distinction between the hobbyist's amateur theatre and the amateur amateurs. The difference is one of attitude, which of course implies goals.

The hard-core amateurs are the church or community hall drama groups for whom theatre is a purely recreational function and nothing more.

Everybody gets involved; everybody tries their hand at acting and-or directing. Previous experience, special knowledge or ability is not a requirement for participation.

There are no standards and no goals other than "having fun." As a group activity it has its useful aspect but a theatre it is not to be taken seriously.

The hobbyist's theatre on the other hand, revolves about a group of informed and experienced amateurs whose dedication to the theatre goes beyond mere idle-hour recreation and who at least strive for standards equally as high —and sometimes much higher —than those some professionals achieve.

It is not possible in terms of one season to establish an organization firmly at such a level. The Theatre Guild will need to be unremitting in striving to maintain the advances it has made in 1967-68.

But if its board and executive maintain their vigil, if its members are loyal and devoted to the ideal that is emerging, the Theatre Guild will have a place in the sun when its 50th anniversary comes around.

Guild Plans Dutch Auction

Tonight at 8 p.m. a Dutch Auction will be held at Victoria Theatre Guild's Langham Court Theatre.

The Guild has received a variety of interesting and useful objects for the sale, proceeds of which will be used to continue renovation and redecoration of the auditorium.

There will be entertainment and light refreshment during the evening.

ALL SEATS RESERVED

Ticket sale for Medea opens Wednesday at Eaton's box office. The play runs Saturday to Saturday, Feb. 17-24, with curtain at 8:15 p.m.

All seats are reserved.

'Guild' Spreads Its Wings

Always Someone Rose To Battle Problems

In a city the size of Victoria, an organization such as the Theatre Guild has a unique function.

Having a population which as yet is unable to maintain a constant flow of high quality professional theatre, many people look to the community organizations for the major share of their live entertainment.

One of the most consistently reliable sources since the third decade of this century, has been the Guild under its various titles.

It began life as the Mimes and Masquers' Guild, soon changed to Victoria Little Theatre and following the healing of a cleavage in the late forties, took on its present title.

Over the years of its operation, the Guild has experienced the inevitable ups and downs and surmounted drastic obstacles.

One major problem appeared to be solved in the mid-thirties when the Langham Court premises was acquired as the Guild's first permanent home.

Difficulties

There has never been a dearth of difficulties but there has always been someone, or a group of someones, to help solve them.

Throughout its existence, despite depressed periods when talented people, for one reason and another, were unavailable, the Theatre Guild has created productions that have lived in the memory of local theatre-goers.

Guild actors, technicians and directors have, over the years, turned their absorbing hobby into careers in a variety of dramatic media across the country and in other parts of the world.

And frequently to the Guild have come professional theatre people who have left their careers for marriage or other reasons but still want to keep their hand in.

So the function of the Theatre Guild is two-fold. It serves the community by providing good live theatre at regular intervals and it directly serves between 100 and 150 active members who find participation at various levels a stimulating and rewarding hobby.

Langham Boasts New Look

A new look for the Langham Court Theatre has been a physical as well as an aesthetic consideration.

With the help of many willing hands the old workroom has been metamorphosed into a charming coffee cavern and the foyer has been ripped out and attractively refinished and decorated.

Future plans call for extending the new decor to encompass the auditorium in an overall scheme, re-carpet aisles and upholster the seats.

But eventually, president Allan Purdy envisages that the Guild will seek new premises.

He feels that the intimate style of the present theatre should be preserved in any event, but that broader facilities for the participants and greater comfort for patrons will be the objective.

He also hopes that workshops and discussion sessions such as the Theatre Guild at one time sponsored, may be re-introduced to bring back into focus the Guild's full registered name—Victoria Theatre Guild and Dramatic School.

Her Secret Dream Is Films After Medea Completed

"There is nothing particularly interesting about me," says attractive Pamela O'Neill when asked for background material by the Theatre Guild's publicity chairman.

But background after all is just that. Something that may or may not add up as insurance of present competence.

As for Pamela, her present competence is not in doubt.

Her director and fellow cast members, and those who have caught glimpses of her rehearsing the role of Medea on the Langham Court stage, think she is enormously interesting.

And they believe her audiences will find her not only interesting but exciting when the wraps come off the play next week.

Pamela O'Neill was born in Alberta but grew up on Vancouver Island.

She was eight years old when she started speech training and dramatic work with gifted Anne Mossman of Yellow Point.

Her first role came within a few months, as the little girl in the one-act comedy, The Dear Departed.

Cradle Song

At 15, again under Miss Mossman's direction, she played the demanding role of Sister Joanna in Cradle Song.

Her obvious talent, training and personal charm caused her to be sought after and in the next few years she played many roles with various groups, particularly in the Nanaimo area.

At one period, with five other actors, she engaged in summer tours of the Gulf Islands, presenting programs of play excerpts.

Pamela has won many awards in Duncan, Victoria and Nanaimo festivals in the field of drama and elocution.

Inevitably, Medea is her biggest challenge to date. A challenge she is meeting head on with a blazing intensity, a white heat of enthusiasm.

Her fellow actors find her "a real trouper and a joy to work with."

Like all genuine creative and re-creative artists, Pamela O'Neill in the midst of one assignment has already, at the perimeter of her vision, other goals she would like to achieve.

She would like to attack many more roles that offered the solid substance of a Medea.

And one day she would like to venture into the film media.

"As a non-professional, of course," she says, smiling and reminding you that she is a wife and mother of two as well as an extremely talented actress.

KODALY
. . . determined

Though for many years his fellow Hungarians appreciated Zoltan Kodaly's zealous efforts to find, analyze and codify little-known folk melodies on which a new national music might be built, and a grateful government honored him as musician-laureate of Hungary—to the world beyond his native land he is known mainly through a few compositions and seems ever to stand in the shadow of his more extrovert, revolutionary compatriot, Bela Bartok.

Kodaly was distressed to think that Hungarian folklore should be represented only by the gypsy melodies which had been made popular by gypsy bands and later dressed up in unseemly rich attire by Brahms and Liszt.

To counteract this misrepresentation, he studied the Magyar songs and dances he (and Bartok) had unearthed, taught countless students to appreciate their native music, and based his own compositions on the modes he had found in the ancient melodies.

Having always been interested in C16th music he managed, somehow, in his compositions to combine the folk idiom in which he had steeped himself with the clear polyphony found in Palestrina.

NATIVE TUNES

The Dances of Marosszek (a) (b) originally written for the piano, is a rondo-like piece in which six native tunes are interwoven.

The orchestral version he wrote for Toscanini (1930) is far oftener played though Malcuzynski, the great Polish pianist intends to play it here in Victoria next month.

The broad easily identified tunes are played several times until we are familiar with them and then, with many orchestral and temporal variations they are tossed back and forth, fragmented and rewoven into a beautifully orchestrated unit.

HEARD AS CHILD

Far less sophisticated and suitelike are the Dances of Galanta (a) (b) he composed in 1934. Based on the first music Kodaly remembered hearing when, as a child, he listened to the ancient gypsy band in Galanta, the five dances are loosely linked together in a musical chain with an introduction and resume ending.

Strongly contrasted in mood and tempo the dances are treated separately with the lightest of thematic links. The contest of melodies in the fourth dance adds to the excitement and the brief touch on other themes which precede; the dramatic halt and final allegro molto vivace, add to the unity of the work as a whole.

MEMORIAL RECORD

Both recordings are good and each offers something of its own.

The Westminster recording (b) on one disc offers the composer's most popular secular works, those by which he is most widely known.

And yet, the CBS recording (a) which has the lovely, too-seldom heard concerto on the reverse side, is perhaps more apt. Eugene Ormandy was born a Hungarian and was, at one time, a student of Kodaly, and this record which was issued in memoriam of Kodaly's death in March, 1967, had originally been planned to congratulate him on his 85th

FOCUS

By BRAD NUGENT

Judy Collins' newest, Wild Flowers, is one of the most perfect albums ever produced. Combining the simplicity of folk music with the complexity of classical music, Miss Collins conveys a mood that is truly unique.

The album is fully orchestrated by Joshua Rifkin. The arrangements are absolutey flawless. Never before in a folk rock album have the combined efforts of musicians and singer been used so well to create a single mood.

One of the most important aspects of this album is the fact that all of the components work so well together instead of functioning as separate features as so often happens with orchestrated pop albums.

It is the perfect blending of poetry and sound, of mood and harmony, of voice and orchestra.

One beautiful Joni Mitchell song is called From Both Sides Now, "I've looked at love from both sides now, but it's love's illusions I recall, I really don't know love at all."

Other cuts include Michael From Mountains, Sisters of Mercy, Sky Fell, and La Chansons des Vieux Ameants (The Song of Old Lovers).

A fine picture is formed with The Buckingham's new album — Portraits. Better tracks include Hey Baby (They're Playing Our Song), Susan, Inside Looking Out and Down.

The Peanut Butter Conspiracy whose Victoria visit a few months back is still being hashed about, is now out on album. The issue, The Great Conspiracy should be spreading into Victoria any day now.

Bill Cosby is back on the album racks. This time with Hooray for the Salvation Army Band!

The almost forgotten Lovin' Spoonful have returned. Everything Playing is the title of their newest LP, their first without Zal.

The unbeatable Jimi Hendrix Experience must have settled the label mix-up that was hanging over them for the last few weeks. With their latest release, Axis Bodl As Love, on the Reprise label it appears it's Reprise to stay.

THE TEEN SCENE

City Groups Popular At the 'Happenings'

By GREG GRAVER and BONNIE RICKETTS

It seems that Victoria's groups are becoming more popular than ever.

The Blue Ruum made their first public appearance last week, and proved to be a great success. They played at the Langford Teen-town last Friday and at the closing of the dance the group was swamped for autographs and showered with compliments.

Another band, Papa Bear's Medicine show from Vancouver, performed their thing at The Nine in the Fifth Place Friday and Saturday night.

If you're wondering where the group's name came from, Papa Bear (Craig Wood) got it in Seattle, and Medicine Show was just added on.

BACH TO ROCK

The members, Mike (drums); Len (bass); Craig (banjo, guitar); John (lead guitar); and Vic (singer) all believe that a singer should sing first for himself and then for the audience. All their music is original, and they sing from Bach to Rock.

You can look forward to seeing them on Let's Go this month, and they are going to tour Alberta soon. Watch for a disc release in the very near future.

Saanich has one, Royal Oak has one, but this week we direct you to the Sidney Teen-town. They will sponsor a dance at the Sanscha Hall at 8 p.m. today, with the Marquis doing the Gig.

Hold on, the British are coming to The Nine in the Fifth Place tonight. The United Empire Loyalists from Vancouver will play from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m.

OUT OF SIGHT

An out-of-sight guy and entertainer will be here for two nights only at The Nine in the Fifth. On Feb. 16 and 17, currently promoting his newest release, 1941 will be big Tom Northcott. It's really happening from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. both nights.

The Victoria Chapter of the Order of Demolay, will hold a dance at the First United Church Hall on the corner of Quadra and Balmoral on Friday. The Marquis will preside from 7 p.m. until 11:30 p.m. and refreshments are available.

For all sports fans, dribble over to Esquimalt High on Feb. 16 and 17 for the lower Vancouver Island Girl's Basketball Championships. Esquimalt, Mount Douglas, Claremont, Vic High, and Oak Bay are involved. The times are Friday, 8 p.m. until 10 p.m., and Saturday from 9 a.m.

Harpsichord Concert

Several months ago widely known Vancouver organist, choir master and harpsichordist, Hugh J. McLean, joined the music faculty of the School of Fine Arts at the University of Victoria.

Holder of a Master of Arts and Music Bachelor degree from Cambridge University, Mr. McLean has been for many years organist and choirmaster of Ryerson United Church, Vancouver, and honorary organist to the University of British Columbia.

Next Tuesday, as one of a series of evening concerts sponsored by Uvic's School of Fine Arts, Hugh McLean will appear in his role of harpsichord recitalist, performing on the new Sabathil harpsichord which is now part of the university's instrument collection.

Programmed is music of Jean-Philippe Rameau, Johan Sebastien Bach, and Samuel Scheidt of the baroque era, and 20th century composers Bohuslav Martinu, Roger Vuataz, Edmund Rubbra and Hans Werner Heinze.

Proceeds of the concert series go to further the work of the School of Fine Arts.

"Did you see the latest issue of Beautiful B.C.?" asked the man from Colquitz. "There's a terrific spread on Victoria."

His table companion in IMPERIAL poolside dining room said he was sending copies to all his relatives.

"What if they all come at once?" asked the man from Colquitz.

"I slyly underlined the part referring to our fine hotels. And I casually mentioned that the U.S. is discouraging folks from going overseas, but Canada is okay, so they should book accommodation early."

"Well," said the man from Colquitz, "if they're like my relatives, you'd better book yourself into IMPERIAL."

'BOX' REDECORATED

Workmen Do Painting, Too

By R. H. GROOMS

For the past few months Bente Rehm's private gallery, Pandora's Box, has been closed for extensive repainting and interior renovation. Her latest show will be reviewed at a later time, but suffice it to say that it is a unique chance to see the colored lithographs of John Snow, a Calgary artist.

The Pandora's Box Gallery is closed on Wednesday and Sunday but open to the public on Friday and Saturday evenings from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Grooms

John Snow was a student of Maxwell Bates, well-known Victoria senior artist, many years ago when Snow first started in art. His work is mainly of the realist school,, but the drawing used in the lithos is quite reminiscent of Bates' style. The Snow exhibition may be seen until Feb. 24.

At the University of Victoria this week, there was a lecture by Dr. Alan Gowans, head of the Division of Art and Art History. This lecture was the first of a series which focuses on the Arts and Crafts Movement in Europe and North America in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

One of the purposes of this series is to acquaint the public and the students and faculty at Uvic with the importance of the nature and scope of this movement,, and to prepare the way for a better acceptance and support for the policies of the Maltwood Museum.

Nature's Forms

The Arts and Crafts movement originated in the mid-19th century in England with the writings and theories of John Ruskin and the writings and designs of William Morris. Its real basis was an interest in honest expression of structure and materials based on nature's forms.

On the European continent it was known under various names such as Art Nouveau or Jugenstil. It was a reaction against the revivals and re-warmed styles of Greek, Gothic, etc. that were such current coin. Art Nouveau was exemplified by people like Gaudi, Beardsley and William Morris.

The major influences on our continent were seen in the work of H. H. Richardson, Louis Sullivan and later Frank Lloyd Wright. Wright called his work Organic Architecture to distinguish it from the classical styles and the geometric abstractions of the other designers of his day. It proved a strong influence and inspiration until the rebellion against it that became known as the International Style.

New Director

At the ordinary house building level, Gustav Stickley, editor of the influential publication Craftsman Magazine, encouraged whole suburbs of these arts and craft type houses. Stockley was the subject for a definitive study by Mr. John Freeman, the new director of the Maltwood Museum. Since there are numerous local Victoria houses in this style an interest is sustained in this movement.

The significance of this lecture series for the Maltwood is of particular local concern. Both William Morris and Burne-Jones had become involved in the Arthurian legend and one outgrowth of this interest in Arthurian studies by the late phase of the Pre-Raphaelite movement spurred serious archaeological investigation in Somerset, England.

These legendary sites of Camelot around Glastonbury and South Cadbury were of special intrigue for Mrs. Katherine Maltwood. She published four works on the Giant Effigies of the Zodiac at Glastonbury, and she left valuable research materials as part of the Maltwood collection. These will form part of a special exhibit at the Maltwood Museum this coming summer.

Further lectures will be given by Prof. Quentin Bell, Thursday, Feb. 15, 8 p.m., on the Pre-Raphaelites. Prof. David Gebhard, Art Gallery director at U. of Calif., Santa Barbara, on Feb. 26, in Social Science Bldg. 108, 8 p.m., on the architects Purcell and Elmslie. Prof. James Acland of the U. of Toronto, Tuesday, Mar. 12, Educ.-Arts 144, 8 p.m., on Gaudi and Art Nouveau. And lastly, Prof. Norris Smith, Washington U., St. Louis, on Fri. April 5, E-A 144, 9 p.m., on Frank Lloyd Wright. Dr. Gowans and Quentin Bell, also are slated for E-A 144.

Famous Critic

Prof. Bell,, the next speaker, is the son of the famous art critic Clive Bell, and the nephew of Virginia Woolf, the English novelist. He has written extensively on this period and has a new book this spring on Bloomsbury, London, a literary and artistic centre so important to the movement in the arts and crafts.

The Victoria Art Gallery Friday opened an exhibition of photographs of old Victoria and the most complete showing ever assembled of the paintings of David Milne.

I reviewed Milne's show a few weeks ago when it was in Vancouver and I am ever more impressed at the sensitive vision and craftmanship of one of Canada's most worthy 20th century artists. No one who loves art should miss the chance to see Milne at his most extensive best.

RAVEL INTRODUCTION OUT

Harp Program Altered for Weekend

A Concerto-Serenata for harp and orchestra by Joaquin Rodrigo will be performed Sunday and Monday by Nicanor Zabaleta and the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

This will replace the Ravel Introduction and Allegro originally scheduled, but the soloist will also be featured in Handel's lovely Harp Concerto.

Blind Spanish composer Rodrigo is noted for his brilliant concerto writing for a variety of stringed instruments. His rarest and most notable exploit was in the the writing of his Aranjuez Concerto for guitar and orchestra.

RARE IN ANNALS

It is rare in the annals of musical compostion for a work to receive such instant recognition and enthusiastic response as did the guitar concerto on its first hearing in 1939.

With quite extraordinary skill he preserves a sense of balance and despite the solo instrument's delicate and antique sound, he never permits it to drown in the orchestral flood and even achieves an effect of dialogue with the orchestra.

In addition to this, and the concerto for harp dedicated to Zabaleta, Rodrigo wrote a Heroic Concerto for piano, the Summer Concerto for violin and a striking cello concerto.

Rodrigo studied extensively in Paris and was much influenced by Dukas with whom he studied for five year, and by fellow expatriates d'Albeniz and de Falla.

The program which is to be conducted by Laszlo Gati, will open with the Rossini Sermiramis Overture and close with Hary Janos, an orchestral suite by famed Hungarian composer, Zoltan Kodaly.

Students at University of Victoiria will, by special arrangement made through university president Dr. Malcolm G. Taylor, be enabled to hear the concert at the university on Sunday evening.

TV THIS WEEK

New Show Called 'Save Canada'

By AL FORREST
Staff Writer

They called a national conference in our living room this week to see if Canada was coming unglued.

It wasn't. But national unity got a real pasting anyway and TV cameras were there to record it all.

Before the show began, someone laid it on the line for the recalcitrant members:

There is absolutely no rational justification for bilingualism but, for Canada's sake, please realize it's desperately urgent that we toss out a few crumbs to assist moderate Quebec leaders in their battle against separatists.

Then the cameras rolled.

And many forgot their cues. Some just couldn't forget the home folks were listening. Others felt the urge to entertain.

MANNING
. . . fired the questions

The two of them could have done the whole chore in five minutes.

It was, in the end, a success, probably.

But it would be well to heed the warning of Premier Manning and not let the agreement turn into a Munich pact of appeasement.

Otherwise, school children 50 years from now may be forced to say:

"They blundered bigger than they knew."

The Trudeau-Johnson slugfest was not difficult to predict. The justice minister could not hope to become PM unless he could prove he could stand up to Quebec.

Besides, as Mr. Johnson later explained: "If we didn't quarrel a bit everyone would think (the conference) was rigged."

You could call his performance colorful only if you are particularly fond of green.

On Monday CTV ran a 90-minute special which concluded that Mr. Trudeau is Canada's man of the hour.

Unless he seizes the initiative he could be edged out by someone a little more sharp.

TONIGHT — The crunch tonight comes at 9 p.m. when The Smothers Brothers (Ch. 6) face the movies ... Mel Torme sings the praises of Bonnie and Clyde for the S. Brothers ... at the same time channel 5 offers the intellectual thriller Freud ... or you might like to lend an ear to Lust For Life (Ch. 12), featuring Kirk Douglas as Vincent Van Gogh.

Dick — "What could the U.S. do with London Bridge if it bought it?"

Now on Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In, Dan Rowan wears a disarmament button on his lapel and says nothing about it. Neither does NBC or the sponsors ... and that's even more eloquent.

It's a new age.

Mondo Cane footnote:

Last Saturday I asked: Why should a censor go to all the trouble of keeping children away from unsuitable movies only to have these films slip through the back door and into the living room two years later on TV?

I have been button-holed and phoned by readers who, I hope, express a minority view because they all chant the same theme:

What right has the government to censor anything at all?

These readers have formulated new definitions:

What is suitable for children? Everything!

What is obscene? Nothing!

Up Goes Barbara Along With Skirt

The 25-year-old British actress is starring in There's a Girl in My Soup, a caper about off-hand romance that's turned out to be the most successful of recent comedy arrivals on Broadway.

In it, she frolics in thigh-high Mary Quant fashions. The rising hemline is a recent development.

"Actually, when it began I was quite reserved and could take it just above the knee. But once you get onto a new fashion, you just relax with it."

Miss Ferris points to the pleated hound's tooth brief she was wearing for lunch during a recent interview.

"My husband John Quested, an English film producer, gave it to me three years ago. Now it's gone from knee-length to nine inches above, and I've told him next year the pleats may disappear entirely."

Skintights plus knickers — her word for panties — and a bit of care while sitting or bending are all that's needed. And when wintry winds blow, she's ready with high boots and fur coat.

Miss Ferris, a snub-nosed, 5-foot-3 blonde with a nicely distributed 100 pounds, reached the theatre by an oblique route.

In five years, however, she has managed a bit part in one film with Sir Laurence Olivier and has persuaded director Joan Littlewood of her ability potential to have another movie written especially for her.

Miss Ferris, born in London's Soho, has been studying modern dance since 14.

She later appeared as a night club entertainer, where Victor Spinetti saw her and urged her to audition with Miss Littlewood who was having a difficult time casting a particular role.

Terrified, Miss Ferris went over — "I didn't know what I was letting myself in for, but the less you know, the more oblivious you are of peril."

The next day, she was in rehearsal for Sparrows Can't Sing, a Cockney happening that she stayed with through its subsequent, successful movie incarnation.

Keep Busy, Says Bings Wife

In addition to being a wife, mother, actress, teacher, and registered nurse, she now has become an author.

It took her two years to write a lively and merry account of her life with her famous singing husband entitled Bing and Other Things.

"Bing thinks I'm over-programmed," she confessed frankly. "But I lack his lovely ability to play, to relax. I thrive on activity — so much so that I don't really know whether it's a fault or a virtue.

"If I do have a virtue, I suppose it's the desire to follow through. I really like to finish anything I start."

Since her marriage, the former Texas beauty queen has borne three children, appeared in a number of films and plays, and won her cap as a registered nurse. She also has the task of supervising the four Crosby homes.

Behind Kathy's endless energy is the fuel of a deep religious conviction and a desire for social service.

"When I was young my mother once told me, 'Living, Kathy, is giving.' I've never forgotten her remark.

Free Scalp Examinations Given

Hair and scalp specialists will be holding a free hair and scalp clinic in Victoria at the Strathcona Hotel on Monday, February 12, 1968 only.

DON'T RESIGN YOURSELF
This internationally famous expert urges that you do not resign yourself to BALDNESS unless you are already bald. Your only obligation is to yourself—free yourself of worries by getting the facts from an Imperial expert today.

WHO CAN BE HELPED?
Will this treatment cure BALDNESS? No. We cannot help men or women who are slick BALD after years of gradual hair loss. BUT where your scalp still grows hair, Imperial can save and improve what you have.

THE IMPORTANT THING IS:
don't wait until it is too late. Learn how BALDNESS can be stopped and NEW HAIR grown on your scalp, in the privacy of your own home.

DELAY INCREASES PROBLEM
Remember that even on smooth bald heads, hair roots may still be alive and capable of growing hair again after proper stimulation and home treatment care. Increased hair production can only be achieved by initiating activity in quiescent—follicles—preventing them from going into the permanent resting state.

GET THE FACTS
If your condition is "hopeless" he'll tell you so frankly. About 5 per cent of those he examines are hopeless.

SEE IMPERIAL TODAY
I want to make it clear to you that you incur no charge or obligation by coming in for an examination.

THE WAR GAME
Victoria Premiere
Fox Cinema

Yet it makes you boil inside when you think such things are possible.

People shot like dogs on the street because there are no pain-killing drugs for their radio-active burns!

Men and women groping the streets with seared eyes and arms outstretched for help!

Almost a third of the population of Britain killed, maimed or dying! Police murdered by starving men and women as they try to protect a food storage depot!

Such is the kind of unmitigated horror presented by Peter Watkins, who wrote, produced and directed The War Game at the invitation of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Ironically, the paternal BBC decided it was too horrible for home-viewing audiences — expecially the murder of children. The corporation decided the film should be released to adult audiences through Pathe Films.

Most of the time Peter Watkins plays his horror story straight and as close to reality as possible. It begins with coolly British preparations for an orderly war — the orderly evacuation of civilians, the deployment of troops, the digging of underground shelters.

Then the A-bomb goes off. The screen whitens with its glare; the sound track shudders and all Hell breaks loose. The police kill off the looters; then turn on the hopelessly injured and shoot them like beasts as they writhe outside hospitals which can no longer help them.

Britain is obviously determined to show the full horrors of nuclear war, while wealthier countries avoid the issue.

Scenes depicting the collapse of law and order are said to have been based on the horrors of Hiroshima when the Allies dropped the first A-bomb in 1945.

Kenneth Tynan, writing in the London newspaper The Observer, said:

"It may be the most important film ever made. We are always being told that a work of art cannot change the course of history.

"I think this one might. It should be screened everywhere on earth."

birthday which he would have celebrated last December.

The Victoria Symphony Orchestra will play Kodaly's most popular work, the suite "Hary Janos" derived from his comic opera of that name, in its next concerts on Feb. 11 and 12.

The opera was popular in Hungary from its first publication but the suite proved even more popular in North America. From the opening glissando sneeze which (according to ancient Hungarian custom) proves the veracity of this tallest of all tales, to the clashing melee of sound which describes the final, ungainly entrance of Napoleon and his court, there is just enough programming to add significance to the descriptive sounds without destroying the attractive music by too detailed a parody.

A marvellous mechanical clock with whirring mechanism, bells chimes, trumpets and a moving band of little soldiers, is vividly depicted by the rolling drums, blaring trumpet, bells and mechanical rhythms of the second movement.

The loping gait, the crashing encounters of the two armies and the hollow mocking moan of the saxophone in the pseudo-funeral march for Napoleon's defeated army which Hary has conquered single-handed, and Napoleon's final complete humiliation, these bring occasion for great mirth to the fourth movement.

Just Like Harlow —Sort Of

PARIS (WP) — Twiggy, looking every bit like Jean Harlow from the neck up, took a second helping of chocolate mousse ("I'm a pig") and announced that she was through with modeling.

That's quite a move for a girl who, as a mannequin, makes an estimated 200 dollars an hour.

Twiggy, who said she's now "aighteen" and weighs 92 pounds, was the same can't-tell-the-front-from-the-back girl — yet her looks have completely changed. It's as if she just stepped out of a silent movie.

Blond curls fluffed out of a tightly pulled-in brown beret. Her kewpie mouth was painted scarlet, her cheeks roughed and her eyes had just brown shadow and mascara. She's through with false eyelashes. Her dress, from her own Twiggy collection, was a striped sweater top over a pleated navy blue jersey maxi skirt, five inches below the knee.

They start shooting in July and hope to be finished in four months' time.

Black Power Blamed For College Riots

ORANGEBURG, S.C. (AP) — A dusk-to-dawn curfew and the exodus of students from two predominantly Negro colleges Friday night brought Orangeburg its first racial peace in five nights.

Previously three Negro students had been killed and 50 persons injured in violence touched off by attempts to integrate a bowling alley.

In ordering the curfew, Gov. Robert McNair blamed the trouble on "Black Power advocates who represent only a small minority of the total student bodies at South Carolina State College and Claflin College."

In New York, the Student Nonviolent Co-ordinating Committee referred to the violence in South Carolina as the "Orangeburg Massacre" and threatened revenge.

The committee's chairman, H. Rap Brown, said: "If we seek redress of our grievances through peaceful and so-called legal means, we will be shot down and murdered.

"If we must die, let us die with the enemy's blood on our hands . . . Let us die like men, fighting back."

From 5 p.m. Friday when the curfew went into effect, streets in the city of 17,000 were virtually deserted except for police and national guard units.

Only one incident was reported Friday night. Henry Lake, the governor's representative in Orangeburg, said four shots were heard by firemen who went to a grass fire on Highway 601 a mile away from the colleges. No one was injured.

Violence began Monday night when a group of Negroes tried to enter the bowling alley, which they have been attempting to integrate for eight months.

They were refused admission and began marching through Orangeburg's downtown area, smashing store windows and overturning automobiles.

The combined student bodies number about 2,600. A police check showed only 80 still in campus dormitories Friday night.

The first injuries and arrests came Tuesday night. The violence built to a peak Thursday night when three students were shot to death in an exchange of gunfire with state patrolmen. Thirty-seven other persons were injured.

Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, wired McNair urging prompt and thorough investigation of the violence.

FERRY CHIEF SUSPENDED FOR MONTH

SEATTLE (AP) — Captain Ed. Ryerson, skipper of the Washington State ferry Hyak, had his license suspended for one month by a U.S. Coast Guard hearing examiner Friday as a result of a Jan. 22 collision between the Hyak and a Canadian tug and barge in Seattle's Elliott Bay.

Examiner James M. Donahue also placed Ryerson on probation for 15 months, with an additional eight-month suspension to be imposed if he is found guilty of any other coast guard charges in that time.

Ryerson pleaded guilty Feb. 1 to coast guard charges of negligence. He admitted in a hearing that the Hyak was travelling "at excessive speed" in foggy weather when it collided with the tug Island Navigator and ricocheted into a railbarge being towed by the tug.

Still pending against the Hyak's mate, Edgar Arnold, are coast guard charges that he failed to inform Ryerson of the tug's fog signals.

'Ban Colored Immigration'

WOLVERHAMPTON, England (CP) — Outspoken Enoch Powell, former cabinet minister and still a Conservative MP for this racially-mixed city, has urged a radical clampdown on immigration into Britain.

His toughly-worded call may spark a new round of national controversy over the issue and embarass his own party leaders, whose attitude is more moderate.

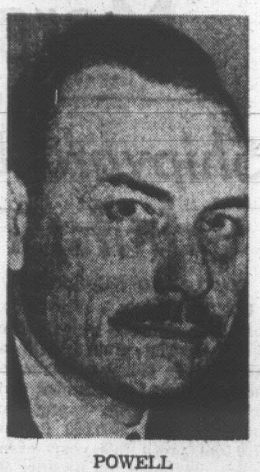
He spoke while a Wolverhampton wrangle over the wearing of traditional turbans and beards by Sikh busmen still goes unresolved.

A health minister in the former Conservative government, he said Friday the "continual flow" of immigrants into Wolverhampton and some other centres is leaving their educational facilities hopelessly overwhelmed.

LIMIT ENTRY

Either the issuing of permits for immigrants "must be virtually terminated, or the unconditional right of entry for dependents withdrawn."

Powell pointed to an act that granted the African country of Kenya its independence in 1963.



POWELL

This gave some 200,000 Indians living there "an absolute right of entry to this country which no Commonwealth citizen . . . from Canada or Australia, Nigeria or Hong Kong, possesses."

Powell, speaking at a Conservative meeting, recalled that a fellow-MP was "dumbfounded when I told him of a constituent whose little daughter was now the only white child in her class at school."

Under a 1962 act, about 8,000 adult male immigrants are allowed entry each year, said Powell, but there is "unrestricted right of entry for dependents."

IMPOSSIBLE TASK

The current law made it "impossible to prevent from 40,000 to 50,000 actual or alleged dependents, mostly children of school age or below, from entering this country every year."

An estimated 1,000,000 Commonwealth immigrants now live in Britain, most of them in industrial cities such as Wolverhampton. Britain's total population is about 55,000,000.

In Wolverhampton itself, bus authorities continue to ban the wearing of beards and turbans by their Sikh crews, whose religion originates in the Punjab region of India.

But the authorities are embarrassed because West Bromwich, 10 miles away, allows such apparel for its busmen, whose vehicles ply Wolverhampton streets under a transportation linkup between the two communities.

NEGRO BOSS ACCUSED OF JOB BIAS

The charges are being pressed on the janitor's behalf by S. Edgar Moon, a Negro and assistant grievance committeeman of United Steelworkers Union Loval 7174 at Mesta Machine Co. in nearby West Homestead.

Gerald J. Roman, 26, filed the grievance, accusing Morris S. Fountain of not permitting him to leave his job to smoke, have a soft drink or engage in conversation with co-workers.

Held in Stabbing

CRESTON, B.C. (CP)—RCMP said Wednesday night they have taken a juvenile into custody following the stabbing death of Robert Best, 17, of nearby Salmo. Police said a group of juveniles who took Best to hospital, where he was pronounced dead, may have witnessed what occurred in an alley outside a pool hall where the victim was found.

Tire Blowout Cause of Crash?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The crash during landing of a Canadian Pacific Airlines at Vancouver International Airport Wednesday might have been caused by a blowout in a $500 tire, the plane's owners said Friday.

Two persons were killed and damage was estimated at $6,000,000.

Frank Lynnott, president of the Seattle company that leased the Boeing 707 to CPA, said the plane's pilot believes a burst tire made him lose control of the 100-ton liner.

"It was just one of those simple things that can't be blamed on anybody," Mr. Lynnott said.

THICK PATCH

Mr. Lynnott, head of Standard Airways Inc., said the runway appeared clear to pilot Albert Burkhalter. But there was one thick patch of fog "at the crucial moment in the landing."

Captain Burkhalter, co-pilot Tom Johnson, navigator Curtis Dahl and engineer Joe Mecenka, the cockpit crew members, spent most of Friday here testifying before a department of transport investigation committee.

BIGGEST BANK MARRIAGE IN U.K. HISTORY ANNOUNCED

Merger Fever Sweeping British Industry

By ALEXANDER CHANCELLOR

LONDON (Reuters) — The merger fever sweeping British business rose to a new pitch this week as proposals for three giant link-ups and the biggest bank amalgamation in British history were announced.

The market value of take-over bids in the first few weeks of 1968 has already exceeded the total for the whole of 1967. It is nearly three times the annual average for 1959-63 and more than eight times the 1954-58 average.

And the trend seems likely to continue.

This huge industrial and business shake-up stretches over a wide spectrum, from banking to auto manufacture, from television to textiles, from breweries to publishing.

The most spectacular developments were in banking. Within two weeks Britain's six largest banks stunned financial circles by announcing proposals that would merge them into only three.

A proposed merger of Barclays, Lloyds and Martins announced this week could create the world's fourth largest banking concern, restoring Britain's place in the big league of international bankers.

Other recent mergers were equally dramatic. On Jan. 17 British Motor Holdings and the Leyland Motor Corp. joined forces to become the world's second largest auto manufacturer outside the United States.

Late last month moves were announced to create the world's biggest television rental group, and a huge tussle is now going on for dominance of Britain's $4,800,000,000-a-year textile industry.

Scores of smaller mergers are in the offing and financial observers expect big developments soon in the insurance and computer fields.

STIMULATE MERGERS

The hectic merger activity was speeded by three factors — tougher trading conditions, active government encouragement and the buoyancy of the London stock market.

The government has encouraged mergers by stressing the need for larger production units to compete in foreign markets. Sometimes is has played an active part, as in last year's merger of the two largest British electrical companies — Amalgamated Electrical Industries and General Electric Co.

But there is a feeling of uneasiness in some business circles. Some say David is often as efficient as Goliath, and that oversized companies may topple under their own weight.

The mergers also caused some trouble on the labor front as industrial rationalization led to factory closings and a rise in the unemployment level.

LONDON (AP) — The Bank of England banned Friday any further mergers among British banking houses until the monopolies commission has finished its investigation into the Lloyds-Barclays-Martins link.

This, in effect, prevents any further bank-merger moves for up to six months.

The move does not affect the proposed Westminster-National Provincial merger, announced Jan. 26 or the Royal Bank of Scotland-National Commercial bank merger, announced Feb. 6, the Bank of England said.

Shipyard Experiment Profits; Then Ends

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Fairfields, the Clyde shipyard which broke new industrial ground with a pull-together policy of management, workers, government and private investment, expects to make at least £300,000 (about $780,000) profit this year—even before reckoning the benefits of sterling devaluation.

The announcement came Friday as Fairfields merged officially with four other Glasgow yards to become Upper Clyde Shipbuilders.

Ironically, it means an end to the controversial Fairfields experiment just as it was proving its worth.

The 108-year-old shipyard, which built many historic British ships including several early Canadian Pacific Empress liners, was rescued from bankruptcy in 1966 by an alliance of state and private money, including a hefty investment by Lord Thomson.

Fairfields workers pledged a no-strike policy to help the yard back on its feet, but a rash of labor troubles broke out last year as streamlining procedures produced inevitable layoffs.

But the streamlining worked. Man-hours involved in producing what shipbuilders call an "equivalent ton" of ship-steel were slashed to 65 from the British average of 85. Some yards go as high as 120. The average in Japan, Britain's sharpest competitor, is estimated at 30.

In his farewell speech to 3,000 workers this week, Iain M. Stewart, the Scottish industrialist who initiated and bossed the new Fairfields setup, expressed his personal disappointment that the experiment couldn't have run its full five-year period. But he was sure the merger decision was wise.

Stewart recalled the experiment had always been looked on as a "rogue elephant" by other shipbuilders and by the government-appointed committee which urged mergers of small yards to make more competitive units in Britain's ailing shipbuilding industry.

Another famous old shipbuilding name disappears in the five-yard merger—John Brown of Clydebank, which built the Cunard Queens and the new Queen Elizabeth 2.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Prices Tumble, But No Panic

By FRITS ROOS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A market hit by a new war scare sent prices tumbling on Canada's major stock exchanges this week.

There was no panic selling, however. Volume was moderate throughout the week.

Oils again paced the decline and only gold issues—which traditionally do well in an atmosphere of international uncertainly—posted strong gains.

Canadian markets followed the trend on Wall Street and much of the decline in major issues was caused by selling pressure in New York.

Prices were down throughout the week but the drop assumed near-crisis proportions Thursday when North American markets became subject to fears of a new war in Korea.

The Toronto exchange absorbed its sharpest loss in more than 2½ years as an estimated $1,800,000 000 was knocked off stocks' market values.

RALLY CUTS LOSSES

The plunge continued through the first hours of trading Friday, but losses were cut in a brief afternoon rally and then prices held stationary, despite continuing heavy selling on Wall Street.

Analysts said the rally was of a technical nature with investors picking up bargains.

One analyst said the serious international political situation now has added its full weight to the three-week-old bearish market which is troubled by a lack of promising economic and business indicators.

Retail and communication issues and pipelines suffered the largest losses among industrial groups in Toronto.

Oshawa Wholesale A fell 4⅞ to 29⅛, Simpsons 2¾ to 31¼, Hudson's Bay Co. 1⅝ to 20 and M. Loeb 1¼ to 13⅝.

Southam News tumbled 4½ to 46 following lower fourth-quarter profits, Thomson Newspapers 1⅜ to 37 and Western Broadcasting 1½ to 18½.

Pembina Pipe Line dropped 2⅝ to 14⅞, Interprovincial 1¾ to 18½ and Westcoast Transmission 1⅝ to 22⅞.

Among blue chips, Inco was down 3⅛ to 111⅝, Falconbridge 3½ to 96½ after reporting lower net annual profits, Bell 2⅜ to 42⅞, Moore Corp. 2 to 26 and CPR 1⅞ to 52.

Premium Iron Ores advanced 45 cents to 2.25 on the announcement of a possible takeover by Georgia-Pacific Corp. of Portland.

At Montreal, Inco was off 5¼ to 111¾, Scott-Lasalle 5 to 40¼, Southam 4½ to 46, Falconbridge 2½ to 96⅝ and Bell 2¼ to 42⅞.

At Vancouver, Bank of British Columbia closed unchanged at 23 in trade of 353 shares.

Oils took a beating as Toronto's group average plummeted 22.22 points to 180.73 — down about 46 points from last month's 226-point record.

Analysts balmed a lashback from high expectations at the start of the current winter drilling season. There was a lack of favorable drilling results and a possible withdrawal of U.S. captial from exploration in Canada.

Dome Pete dropped 5 to 51½, Hudson's Bay 4⅞ to 34, Husky 3¼ to 19, Imperial 3 to 63 and Canadian Superior and Central-Del 2⅞ each to 38⅞ and 17½.

At Montreal, Central-Del was off 3 to 17⅞, BA 2⅜ to 38¼ and Imperial and Husky 2½ each to 63 and 20.

URANIUMS TUMBLE

The base-metal drop was mainly caused by tumbling uranium stocks, especially Denison which lost 10¼ to 61⅝ at Toronto.

Roman Corp. was down 3⅛ to 8⅜, Rio Algom 2⅞ to 29¼, Preston 2¼ to 16⅜ and Pine Point 2¼ to 42¼.

Denison fell 11⅞ to 61⅝ at Montreal and Hudson Bay Mining and Rio Algom 3¼ each to 56⅞ and 29⅜.

Gold issues, which have boomed since the devaluation of the British pound last November, continued to soar. Toronto's group average gained 7.77 to 225.50 after hitting a 30-year high of 226.12 early in the week.

Dome jumped 4½ to 72, Campbell Red Lake 2 to 33, Giant Yellowknife 1⅜ to 13⅛ and Dickenson 55 cents to 4.40. Kerr Addison slipped ¾ to 17 and Leitgh 1¾ to 10¼.

On index, Toronto's industrials were down 5.83 to the January, 1967, level of 150.74 and base metals 6.52 to 95.68. Declines outnumbered advances 577 to 153 while 189 issues remained unchanged. Volume was 14,356,000 shares compared with 19,193,000 the previous week.

At Montreal industrials tumbled 6.28 to 154.67 and the composite index 5.78 to 145.56. Volume slipped to 4,529,000 shares from 6,491,000 while declines outpaced advances 180 to 89 with 142 issues unchanged.

Vancouver's industrial index fell 3.96 to 159.38, mines 10.07 to 196.07 and pipelines 8.75 to 124.39. Volume was a moderate 6,700,000 shares.

PWA Income Shows Gain, Profits Drop

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific Western Airlines reported a 22 per cent gain in operating revenues for 1967 but a sharp drop in net profit because of depreciation and amortization of new jet equipment.

A preliminary report for the year ended Dec. 31 showed net earnings of $608,000 compared with $1,425,000 for 1966.

Earnings before the depreciation and amortization climbed to $1,762,000 compared with the previous year's $1,364,000.

B. C. Samis, chairman, said gross revenues climbed to $14,928,000. Gross revenue in 1966 was $12,280,000.

He said investment in new equipment last year reached $17,000,000.

Record Year For Great-West Assurance Firm

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Great-West Life Assurance Co. has reported that it had its best year ever in 1967.

Sales, earnings, growth in assets and business in force all reached record highs, president D. E. Kilgour said in presenting his report to the company's 76th annual meeting.

Great-West assets climbed $87,868,000 to $1,310,313,000 at year-end, the largest increase on record. Company assets have almost doubled in the last 10 years.

Total income from all sources in 1967 was $271,975,000, $15,600,000 higher than the previous year. The net rate of interest earned rose for the 19th consecutive year to 5.92 per cent from 5.83 per cent in 1966.

Income Tax Tips

By P. . KELLY
Dept. of National Revenue

Who is eligible to average his income for tax purposes in 1967?

A. Three requirements must be met:

1. The chief source of income for the period of averaging must have been from farming and (or) fishing and no averaging could have been made in the previous five years.

2. A tax return must have been filed on time for each of the five years used in the averaging period. Exceptions to this are returns for non-taxable years in the averaging period, which must be filed by April 30, 1968.

3. Form T2011 "election to average income" must be filed on or before April 30, 1968.

Can one return be used for both husband and wife?

A. No, not in Canada. A separate return must be completed for everyone who is required to file.

Banks to Merge

LONDON (AP) — The Royal Bank of Scotland is to merge with the National Commercial Bank of Scotland Ltd., it has been announced. A new holding company is to be formed as the vehicle for the merger.

Murphy Oil Profits Dip

CALGARY (CP) — Murphy Oil Ltd. of Calgary has announced net earnings of $1,200,000 for 1967, or about 20 per cent less compared with earnings of $1,500,000 in 1966.

But gross revenue totalled $23,900,000 compared with $20,000,000 in 1966. Cash flow during 1967 showed only a slight reduction and came to $3,400,000.

The company said reduced net income was due to increased charges for abandoned wells, greater exploration costs as well as lower income from petroleum products.

New Oil Policy Proposed

CALGARY (CP)—Expansion of crude oil markets as well as pipeline facilities in the United States east of the Rockies Friday was advocated in a new national oil policy proposal by the Calgary Chamber of Commerce.

The report, presented by L. J. Richards, chairman of the chamber's petroleum and natural gas committee, will be submitted for further support to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

The report said that Canadian oil fields work at less than 50 per cent capacity and that some Canadian gas fields are not being exploited despite shortages of fossil fuels in various regions of the U.S.

The report further stated that industry must "plan and provide the necessary facilities for transporting Canadian crude oil and natural gas with proper regard to production and market potential."

BUSINESS VIEWS

Bennett Strikes Sour Note With Bid for Higher Tax

By AB KENT
Business Editor

Kent

First reaction to a hike in taxes proposed by Premier Bennett strikes a chord that sounded frequently last year when the Carter report suggested tax incentives be removed in mining and petroleum development.

The premier said he would like to raise an additional $13 million from the forest and mining industries this year.

"Obviously we are not going to give three cheers, noting the world market conditions," said a senior executive of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.

The forest industry is already meeting stiff world price competition and needs no higher taxes to add to its burden.

Like the forest industry, mining depends on world market prices. Charles Mitchell, secretary of the Mining Association of B.C., said "we have no control over the prices and increased taxes can't be passed on to the customer."

But it is in the area of new development that the ghost of Carter reaction walks again. Mining companies fear increased taxes could discourage prospective new development, which in the past decade has placed B.C. in the forefront of mining expansion in Canada.

Removing incentives for mineral exploration and exploitation as suggested by Carter would do the same thing, the mining companies said.

Said Mr. Mitchell:

"We feel that while increased taxation in this industry will provide some immediate revenue for the government, in the longer term there is the serious danger that it could threaten continued growth of the industry.

"Some very large properties could come into production in the next five years. They haven't reached the final commitment stage, and nothing is more timid than $50 million.

"We would be very disturbed if the government departed from the previous policy of encouraging this capital and turned to one of frightening it away. Some hundreds of millions might be involved."

Putting taxation on a punitive basis would have an overall long-term effect of reducing tax revenues, Mr. Mitchell suggested, at the same time cutting employment and earnings.

The mines, he said, already pay federal taxes, provincial taxes, school taxes, sales taxes, fuel taxes, to name the prominent ones. A large number of mines are semi-marginal which could become uneconomic with a substantial tax raise.

And if low quality material is being mined, "what can happen is that today's ore may become tomorrow's waste," he said.

Finally, drawing attention to the $400-$500 million invested in new B.C. mining properties, Mr. Mitchell said this was the result of stable and far-sighted legislation and administration.

"This has been very important because this capital can find other places than B.C. We are competing for this money."

Attempts to increase sales of selected and scientifically developed cereal grain seed were made Thursday in Buenos Aires. Four major dealers and two government agents were to spend a week in Argentina on the campaign.

At the same time, Argentina was expected to push for more Canadian acceptance of precooked frozen beef and other products of the Pampas.

The men represented Alberta Wheat Pool, Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, McCabe Wheat Co. Ltd. and Canadian Seed Dealers Association. The government men were from Quebec's agriculture production division and the federal trade department.

In a similar vein, organizational progress is being made by a new B.C.-based venture concentrating on the selective growing of high-yielding grains for sale to underdeveloped agricultural countries.

This is the work of World Seeds Inc., financed largely by B.C. Sugar Refining Co. Ltd. in the early stages of research and development of new seed grains. B.C. Sugar now will form World Seeds Canada Ltd. to carry on the work, and retain a 50 per cent interest in World Seeds Inc.

First product to be marketed is Red River 68, a high-yielding red spring wheat recently offered in Fargo, N.D.

The company said the seed would not be offered in Canada.

The "rail bridge" concept supported by Commercial Transport Minister Robert Bonner and suggested recently in London is gaining momentum.

The plan would be to use Canada's trans-continental railways for high speed freight movements from the Pacific—where ships from the Orient, Antipodes and East Asia would empty containerized cargo at such a terminal as Roberts Bank super-port—to the Atlantic, where container-carrying ships would again load freight for England and European markets.

The "bridge" would reduce long weeks of ocean travel to just two or three weeks, it is thought.

British industrialists Thursday were offered a similar super-port to handle vessels of up to 500,000 tons when New Brunswick developers spoke to a panel of the London Chamber of Commerce.

President James Addison, of the N.B. Development Corp., said such a terminal could be built in his province or Nova Scotia to receive 100-miles-an-hour freight trains from the Pacific. It would provide massive and efficient bulk shipping at relatively low cost, he said.

Mine, Logging Tax Hike 5 Per Cent

The mining and logging taxes will be raised from 10 per cent to 15 per cent of company incomes under two bills introduced in the legislature Friday.

In both cases, exemptions would be reduced from $25,000 to the first $10,000 of income before the tax levies apply.

The increases will raise logging tax revenues by $1.7 million to $7.9 million and boost the mining tax by $1.4 million to $6 million according to estimates tabled by Premier Bennett.

In both cases, the raises would go into effect April 1 at the start of the coming fiscal year.

The mining tax bill also would add coal to the minerals subject to the levy but petroleum would remain exempt.

Nine other bills were introduced by the government in connection with Friday's budget speech. They would:

Re-establish the home acquisition grant as a $1,000 subsidy but only for construction of new homes begun on or after Friday, cancelling the current $525 grant towards buying existing homes, on July 1;

Raise the homeowners grant by $10 to $130;

Raise municipal per capita grants to a flat $25 but attach strings that it can only be spent, in order of priority, on roads, pollution control, policing and parks;

Give the school districts and regional hospital districts financing authorities formal status as crown corporations;

Put a ceiling of 5 per cent on the annual amount which a school district can increase its assessment roll total for purely "book" purposes and also added a rider that comparable properties must be assessed the same, "including in particular, new homes" even though their costs may have differed;

Larger Sales In U.S. Likely

OTTAWA (CP) — Larger sales of Canadian-made furniture, home freezers and refrigerators should be found in the United States as a result of Kennedy Round tariff cuts, government officials told a Commons committee Thursday.

The said the U.S. is cutting its duties on imports of these items from Canada to a greater exten than this country is reducing its tariff against American-made products.

The committee on finance, trade and economic affairs completed its study of the Kennedy Round, and will meet next week to draft its report to the Commons.

In the Kennedy Round of negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, more than 50 countries negotiated reductions of up to 50 per cent in duties.

CPA Wants Stop at Ottawa

VANCOUVER (CP)—Canadian Pacific Airlines expects to include Ottawa in its second daily Trans-Canada flight early next year, it was reported Friday.

The airline said a study is currently under way to determine the traffic patterns between Ottawa and Toronto, and Ottawa and Montreal.

The privately-owned airline said it may decide traffic volume is not large enought to warrant the use of DC-8 jets on the run. In that event, twin-engine, Boeing 737 medium range jets may be used.

The announcement followed a question raised in the Commons by L. R. Sherman (PC—Winnipeg South).

He asked if the new cross-Canada rights granted to CPA would be extended to fly in and out of the nation's capital.

Transport Minister Hellyer said CPA had applied to the Canadian Tranportation Commission for permission to service Ottawa as well as other cities.

IT'S MY VIEW . . .

By Ernie Fedoruk

It was hockey business that look me to Kelowna last weekend, but it was curling that kept creeping into most of the conversations.

Next month (March 4-8), Kelowna becomes the curling capital of Canada. With a population of about 18,000, it also draws the honor of being one of the smallest centres ever to accept the host duties for the Brier.

It will, probably, also claim to be the last "small town" to stage Canada's premier curling show.

That's how Gordon Smith sees it.

"Knowing the curling people and how they feel about making this thing a success," the manager of Kelowna's 2,200-seat arena reported, "I don't think you'll ever see a small centre get the Brier again.

The slender Smith is one of B.C.'s better rink managers, respected by Victoria's Jack Morgan. And vice-versa. The Little League people will remember Smith as the manager of a Kelowna team that won the B.C. championship two years ago.

His Li'l Leaguers lost the Canadian championship to Windsor is a playoff at Hampton Park.

His interest at the moment is to make the 1968 curling playdowns a success. All the weekly admission tickets (over 2,000) have been sold, but that doesn't mean the Okanagan is over the hump.

Unless they're "dead sure" of seats, Victorians aren't advised to motor to Kelowna at the last minute.

Considering the Okanagan's population, there shouldn't be any problems. Penticton is a mere 38 miles to the south, Vernon another 35 miles to the north. Between, in and around the three centres, the population is estimated "about 100.000."

The Okanagan has the people and the ambition, but there is no way to enlarge on Kelowna's rink.

Thanks to a Smith suggestion, the Kelowna curlers will strive for financial success in a rather novel idea. They're going to sell some of the seats twice!

"People who have purchased the weekly 'season' tickets will have to pick up seating stubs before every draw. If they don't, we'll put the seats up for sale again 20 minutes before every draw.

"A great many, especially businesses, buy the weekly tickets but don't take in every draw. This way, we'll make sure there are no vacant seats at any time.

"It's the only way we'll make it."

Compounding the small rink's situation is the fact that over 500 officials, players and press representatives will abscond with a considerable number of Kelowna's precious seats.

Smith said "accommodating the curlers would be a relatively easy matter." But some of the Dominion Curling Associations' demands, he suggested, are sending costs far beyond Kelowna's original estimate.

"The list of social functions is really something," Smith noted. "I can't ever remember curlers ever wanting to eat so well . . ."

He said curlers, but I have a hunch he meant officials.

Dockers 'Fouled' By Their Own Foul

Ken Lundeen stood up to pressure from the foul line, and that's the big reason Claremont holds down a share of second place in the Inter-High School Boys' Basketball League today.

Claremont fired its hopes of a second-place finish by edging Esquimalt Dockers 50-45 in a thrilling overtime battle at Claremont Friday.

Claremont has one game remaining on its schedule, that against sixth-place Belmont Braves. The Cs. are tied with Victoria High, but the Totems already have completed their schedule.

Lundeen helped fashion victory in Friday's crucial battle. In addition to emerging as Claremont's high scorer with 17 points, he scored the points that forced overtime and snatched victory from defeat.

FOULED AT WHISTLE

Esquimalt led by two points, 41-39. But Lundeen was fouled just as the regulation-ending whistle sounded. Taking the free-throw line on a 1-and-1 situation, he sank both shots to force overtime.

At Oak Bay, Gary Taylor's Green and White machine made it 18 victories in 19 starts this season by defeating Chemainus 62-42.

Don Burrows (20), Dave Morgan (15) and Tom Holmes (12) led Oak Bay's attack. Chemainus was best served by Rod Francoeur (19) and Pete Watson (10).

West Indies Loses Pair For Five Runs

KINGSTON (Reuters) — West Indies lost both opening batsmen for only five runs and made a disastrous start in a reply to England's first innings total of 376 on the second day of the second cricket test in Jamaica Friday.

West Indies was 27 for two at the close and faced a long uphill struggle on a troublesome pitch.

Earlier England had collapsed from an overnight score of 222 for two to 376 all out. England captain Colin Cowdrey made 101, his 19th test century, and shared a third wicket stand of 101 with Ken Barrington, who made 63.

Added Fan Support Doesn't Help Canucks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vancouver Canucks Friday continued to be winners at the gate but losers on the ice as 8,478 fans saw the Canucks drop a 3-1 decision to Portland Buckaroos in one of three Western Hockey League games played.

In other contests, San Diego Gulls upset Seattle Totems 3-1 in Seattle and the American League Hershey Bears whipped Phoenix Roadrunners 5-3 in Phoenix.

Vancouver has been drawing large crowds since the club moved into a new $6,000,000 Coliseum, but it is in last place with 40 points. Canucks' defeat at the hands of Portland, lifted the Buckaroos four full points ahead of second-place Seattle.

A crowd of 6,203 saw Seattle lose to San Diego. The win consolidated San Diego's hold on third place with 48 points.

NOT FAST ENOUGH

Pairings Enjoy Upsetting 'Fun'

The doubles division had "all the fun" in Vancouver Island open badminton activity at the Cordova Bay Hall Friday evening.

And nobody enjoyed the action more than the husband-and-wife pairing of Carol and John Meija and the Ivor Goodmanson-Lorne McLean combination.

The Meijas provided the big upset in mixed doubles play, sidelining the highly-regarded Vancouver pairing of Pat Atkinson and Vic Conley, 18-16, 15-8.

Goodmanson and McLean drew their enjoyment out of a men's doubles match. They kayoed the defending Island champions, Ron Karadimas and Grant Hazelwood, 6-15, 15-8, 17-14. The winners had 10 set point serves before finally squeaking through.

ANOTHER SCARE

Third-seeded Conley and Petrie were handed a big scare by Victoria's Tut Jones and Jim Wells. The favored Vancouver duo finally won the thrilling three-setter, 15-12, 11-15, 18-16.

In another men's doubles match, city champions Bob Hunt and Ed Hedley eliminated Rich Howe and Bill Powell, 15-8, 15-6.

Play resumed this morning and will wind up tonight. Semifinals, which invariably provide the greatest dramatics, will get under way at 7 this evening. Finals will follow.

Contending List Trimmed to Four

PENTICTON CP)—Four rinks Friday remained in contention for the B.C. Curling Association championship and the right to meet the Coast winner for the provincial title.

The four include three from Kamloops and one from Prince George. The finalist of the "A" event meets the finalist of the "B" event today.

Competing in the "A" event will be Al Lachance and Emile Jurista, both of Kamloops. In the "B" event, Kelly Carin of Kamloops meets Kevin Smale of Prince George.

Lachance Friday defeated Jerry Hallquist of Summerland while Jurista beat Ernie Strasdin of Prince George in the "A" event. It took Jurista an extra end to win 13-12.

Carin defeated Don Scherk of Prince Rupert and Smale beat Strasdin who had survived both events until Friday.

All seven zone champions except Carin were eliminated.

In earlier "B" action Friday, Scherk beat Lionel Stokes of Whitehorse while Carin beat Hallquist. Other "B" play saw Strasdin defeat Eric Bisgrove of Kimberley in an extra end, and Smale beat Danny Martell of Kelowna.

Chinook Ace Shares Voting Lead

VANCOUVER (CP)—Ollie Moilanen of Victoria Chinooks and Don Gatley of Vancouver Grocers topped polling with 90 points each to win positions Friday on the Junior Men's Intercity Basketball League all-star team.

Others named to the first string squad were Don Redmond of the Grocers with 75 points and Corky Jossul and Brock Hilliard of Vancouver CYO, with 75 and 55 points respectively.

The players were selected by a seven-man committee that included coaches of the six-team league who were not permitted to vote for their own players.

The Chinooks placed two players on the second string team, Rod Fields and Drew Schroeder, with 35 and 65 points respectively. Clare Wakefield of CYO polled 45 points, and Vancouver Killarney players Ron Olnyk 45 and Bob Steeves 55.

Each voted for first and second team positions. A first team vote brought 15 points and second string 10.

The league's most valuable player trophy is to be presented tonight during half time of a game in Vancouver between CYO and Chinooks.

Chinooks won the first two games of the best-of-five B.C. final and can take the title by beating CYO tonight or in a fourth game Sunday.

Gold Medal Hopes Fade As Nancy Finishes 10th

Austrian Takes Downhill Race; Skate Mark Falls

By BRUCE LEVETT

GRENOBLE, France (CP) — Pretty Olga Pall, an Austrian gas station attendant, ended French skiing domination at the Winter Olympics when she won the women's downhill race today and dashed Nancy Greene's hopes of winning her first gold medal.

A disappointed Nancy, one of the favorites, could do no better than 10th but she still has a chance for the elusive gold in the two slalom events next week.

The 24-year-old Rossland, B.C., skier is one of the main hopes of the Canadian team for a gold medal. The hockey team has been beaten once — by Finland — and its chances of winning one now are slimmer as the Russians go on their merry way toward another Olympic title.

Miss Pall, a 20-year-old brunette, flashed down the 1½-mile long slopes of Chamrousse to win the downhill by more than a half second from Isabelle Mir of France.

RECORD BROKEN

The first Oympic record was broken in speed skating as Finland's Jaika Justonen dug her flashing blades in the race against the clock to win the gold medal in the women's metric mile.

Miss Justonen, a 26-year-old blonde typist from Helsinki, clocked a record two minutes, 22.4 seconds in the 1,500-metre event, erasing two-tenths of a second off the mark set by Lidia Skoblikova of Russia at Innsbruck, Austria, in 1964. Mrs. Skoblikova won all the four women's gold medals at Innsbruck. Today she was 11th in the field of 30.

The third gold medal awarded in the morning competition went to Norwegian lumberjack Harold Groenningen in the men's 15-kilometre nordic cross-country ski race.

BATTLE FOR MEDALS

The battle for gold medals was turning into a real dogfight as seven gold awarded in the first five days of competition have been won by seven countries.

Austria, Finland, Norway, France, Russia, Italy and Sweden all have won one gold medal.

Skiing with a little yellow flower pinned to the back of her helmet, Miss Pall regained the gold medal for Austria just minutes after France's Isabelle Mir had knocked another Austrian girl, Christi Haas, out of the lead.

PLACES FIRST

When the seasaw battle was over, Miss Pall was on top with a time of one minute, 40.87 seconds, Miss Mir was second and in possession of the silver medal in 1:41.33, and Miss Haas, the defending downhill queen, had the third-place bronze in 1:41.1.

Next came another Austrian, Brigitte Seiwald, followed by another French skier, Annie Famose.

Miss Greene placed 10th in 1:43.12. The best U.S. placing was 17th by Kiki Cutter, who did 1:44.94.

Miss Greene, winner of the World Alpine Cup in 1967, was silent almost morose, after she ran. Then she opened up a bit.

"I'm very disappointed and I'm not sure how to explain it," she said.

"It was a really bad day. We have been wax testing all week and I hate to blame it on the wax but I just didn't feel like I was running well or that I was going as fast as I could."

KNEE FINE

Actually, she was almost four seconds faster than her practice run of 1:46.7 Thursday, the fastest of any of the skiers on the slopes. That prompted her coach, Verne Anderson, to predict that she would win the race.

Judi Leinweber, 17-year-old blonde from Nelson, B.C., next to Miss Greene the best Canadian in the race, finished 20th in 1:45.60.

Miss Leinweber said: "We did not rewax. We just rubbed the bottom of our skis a bit after Nancy tipped us off by walkie-talkie."

Karen Dokka, 21, of Burnaby, B.C., was 22nd in 1:47.55 and 15-year-old Betsy Clifford of Ottawa 23rd in 1:47.60.

Miss Clifford, competing in her first international bigtime event, brushed her effort off as just plain "lousy."

COMMERCIALISM EVERYWHERE . . . AT GRENOBLE

Take New Look, Avery!

Byy WILL GRIMSLEY

GRENOBLE, France (AP) — Commercialism, says Avery Brundage, the 80-year-old president of the International Olympic Committee, is threatening to kill the Olympic Games. The remark was made while he was battling, successfully it turned out, to curb free advertising for the makers of skis.

After taking a close look at Olympic life in Grenoble, someone has suggested that the IOC chief adjust his spectacles.

Commercialism is everywhere, and it's mushrooming.

Every Olympic sign on every street and intersection leading to the outlying Alpine venues carries the word "Total." It's a gasoline, furnishing fuel for the official cars.

Olivetti is providing typewriters for the 3,000 members of the press, radio and TV. International Business Machines provides the results, and lets you know it with signs everywhere. The timing is done by Omega and Longines, well advertised.

Balmain designed the hostess uniforms. Bendix provided the refrigerators and Phillips supplied the TV sets. Gilette runs the barber shops and beauty salons and Culligan furnishes the water purifier for the speed-skating rink.

Chartreuse puts out a fancy brochure on the gastronomic menus in the press restaurant. The mineral water is by Vittel, wines by Kravi, and the beef by Charolais cattle. Ovomaltine has put up small stands at the ski sites, dispensing free hot drinks. It is rivalled by Coca Cola, with free stocks of pop in almost every official building.

Kodak has the processing laboratories at all official sites.

All official press releases are reproduced by Gestetner — and say so.

All press men have been applied a thick book of coupons — each coupon for a handful of gifts every day— razors, perfume, cigarette lighters, radios, watches and thermos jugs.

"My goodness," said one writer, "how am I going to get all this stuff home?

SIDELINED by flu is Victoria Cougar goalie Murray Finlay. He's expected to miss tonight's B.C. Junnor Hockey League battle with leading Penticton Broncos at Memorial Arena, starting 8:30, but may be ready for Sunday game in Vernon.

JUNIOR RUGBY TOURNAMENT

Twenty-six teams are scheduled to compete Sunday in a Junior seven-a-side rugby tournament at Macdonald Park, starting at 11 a.m.

Competition will be in two divisions—under 18 and under 16—with finals expected to be played about 4 p.m.

Visiting teams will come from Vancouver, Brentwood, Shawnigan Lake, Cowichan and Mill Bay.

Andretti Hits Daytona Wall

Fighting Finns Scare Czechs; Canadians Win

GRENOBLE (CP) — Czecho-slovakia's national team eked out a 4-3 victory over fighting Finland today in an encounter that barely missed being a repeat of Finland's upset win over Canada in the Olympic hockey tournament Thursday night.

The Czechs, scoring their third straight win in the eight-country round-robin, survived a first-period onslaught that gave the Finns a 1-0 lead by scoring three goals in the middle period and another in the third.

FINNS TRIED HARD

The Czechs outshot Finland by the one-sided margin of 43 to 10, but still they had their hands full at times when the Finns broke through as they did in the third period and almost tied the game.

Czechoslovakia was leading 4-1 with fewer than 14 minutes left when Veli-Pekka Ketola scored and with about two minutes to go Lasse Oksane cut the Czech margin to a single goal.

In today's other game, Sweden thumped East Germany 5-2 for a third straight victory to pull into a first-place tie with Russia and Czechoslovakia.

Russia continued its unbeaten march Friday by trimming the United States 10-2 before Canada crushed East Germany 11-0 in the most one-sided game of the tourney.

Still smarting over Thursday's humiliating 5-2 loss to Finland, the Canadians were in no mood to play another "close" game against the East Germans.

Morris Mott, 21-year-old history student from Creelman, Sask., led Canada with four goals. That output is the most by any player in a game so far in the eight-country championship tournament.

NEARS LEADER

Mott leads the team scoring with five goals and an assist for six points. And he's not far behind Russia's scoring leader, Anatoly Firsov, who has a total of seven goals.

Firsov got three goals Friday in Russia's win over the United States.

MEETS U.S. SUNDAY

Canada plays thrice-beaten United States Sunday while the Russians play West Germany, also triple losers.

After Ken Broderick let in all of Finland's goals and appeared shaky in his first Olympic start, coach McLeod decided to go with young Wayne Stephenson against the East Germans. Stephenson had held the West Germans in Canada's 6-1 opening win Tuesday night.

Fran Huck scored twice and collected an assist. Roger Bourbonnais had his best night of the tournament with a goal and two assists. And Ted Hargreaves, Dan O'Shea, Steve Monteith and Herb Pinder each scored.

Rifles and Vikings Spring Surprises

Last-place Queen's Own Rifles dealt the first shock by upsetting Stocker North Americans 6-2.

Then University of Victoria Vikings came along to tie the favored UBC Thunderbirds 4-4 in an intercollegiate exhibition. The vaunted T-Birds and Vikings meet again tonight starting at 6.

THREE-GOAL EFFORT

Three goals by Des Desjardins, two by Mick Brown and a single from Tod Barnes helped Rifles to shoot down Stockers and prevent the movers from stepping into undisputed possession of the Vancouver Island Hockey League lead.

Paul Bion's goal at 19:14 of the third period earned Vikings their draw with the tough Birds. Ted Sarkissian, Bill Rudyk and Jim Haggarty scored Uvic's other goals while goalie Jack Leggett turned in a strong performance.

Tom Koretchuk scored a pair for UBC while Miles Desjardins and Jack James popped in singles.

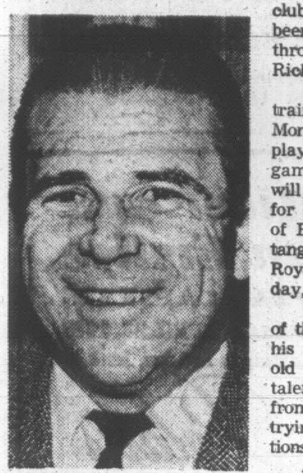
Famed 'Major' Made Success Soccer Habit

As might have been expected, the "Galloping Major" is setting a brisk pace for Vancouver Royals as he prepares the club for the North American Soccer League season.

Ferenc Puskas, the famed "Galloping Major" who sparked the Hungarian national team through seven undefeated seasons before becoming the scoring leader of the famed Real Madrid club for several years, has been chasing the Royals through their paces at a Richmond training camp.



FERENC PUSKAS
. . . here Wednesday

Coach Puskas opened training for his pro booters Monday and watched them play their first inter-squad game Thursday. Sunday he will take the Royals to Seattle for a match with Bonsucesso of Brazil and the same clubs tangle under the lights at Royal Athletic Park Wednesday, starting at 7:30 p.m.

While it is doubtful if any of the Royals will ever match his scoring feats, the 41-year-old coach has a wealth of talent among the 23 players from 10 countries who are trying out for starting positions.

And the man who will make his first visit to Victoria Wednesday can be expected to pass on to his players some of the competitive spirit and leadership qualities that made him, for 20 years, one of Europe's most respected athletes.

Royals' chairman George Fleharty summed it up last year when, as president of the San Francisco Golden Gate Gales, he announced the signing of Puskas.

"Having watched Puskas on the field and off," said Fleharty, "I am positive we have with us one of the great natural leaders in sport."

The Gales have since merged with Vancouver and one of the major benefits for the Royals was the acquisition of the world-renowned Puskas, rated with Sir Stanley Matthews of England and Brazil's Pele as soccer's all-time top three players.

He developed his skills so rapidly that it took a special government permit to allow him to play for his country's top team, Kispest, at age 17.

It tool Puskas only two games to prove that he was already Hungary's top scorer. After collecting seven goals in his two starts with Kispest, Puskas was immediately placed on Hungary's international team.

Opposing goalies quickly came to fear Puskas' blazing shot and he remained on every international team until he left Hungary, representing his country 84 times.

Highlights of this fantastic string came at London's Wembley Stadium in 1953 when Puskas scored twice and set up three other goals as Hungary defeated England 6-3, for the first time in more than 100 years.

Success followed Puskas wherever he went.

He spent four years with Kispest and the team won four championships with Puskas as captain.

Sports followers the world over followed the career of Puskas. In 1952-53-54, an international poll named him the world's second most famous athlete.

Puskas became a colonel in the Hungarian army when Kispest became known as Honved, a military team. With Puskas averaging two goals per game, Honved played all over the world without defeat for five consecutive seasons.

When the bloody Hungarian revolution occurred in 1956, the greatest player in Hungarian soccer history fled to freedom with his wife and young daughter, Aniko.

They found Puskas in Italy, ready to sign with Inter Milan for $200,000. It cost Real Madrid $300,000 and many fringe benefits to snatch the Galloping Major from Inter Milan.

Then, following an unusual political move, began another chapter in the Puskas legend.

Puskas arrived in Spain on a Sunday. The Spanish government called an extraordinary meeting the following day and granted Puskas citizenship. The move allowed Puskas to play for Spain the next day, rather than wait one year, as was the normal case, before playing for another country.

Real Madrid became the European champion six times in nine years and Puskas won the country's high scoring title seven times.

He became known to millions as Pancho, his Spanish nickname.

When he signed a three-year contract last spring, Puskas became the first international great to depart for North America.

"I believe many talented young stars will want to develop their abilities under this gifted master," Fleharty said in announcing the signing of Puskas.

Puskas, who speaks three languages and can also make himself understood in English, will provide Vancouver players with the intensive technical training unavailable in most of North America.

BIG GUYS FALTER

Weiskopf Holds One-Shot Lead

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—Tom Weiskopf appeared in control entering the third round of the $150,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open golf tournament today as Jack Nicklaus "shut off like a faucet" and Arnold Palmer "ran out of gas."

Weiskopf turned in a 68 Friday to go with an opening day 66 for a 134, 10 strokes under par on the 36-36-72 test.

Rain fell Friday night and more was expected today with resultant higher scores. But already par had taken a beating.

Weiskopf held a one-stroke-lead over Dave Hill of Evergreen, Colo., who had 67-68. Third at 136 was Nicklaus, the closest of the big three in the action. Billy Casper had a 140 and Palmer a 144.

Nicklaus started with a 32 and ended with a 37 when Friday's cool temperatures physically got to his touch.

SURVIVES CUT

Palmer, whose 72-72-144 just made the cut, said he is tired after five straight weeks of tournament play.

Casper, with 68-70, is still in the running.

Al Balding and George Knudson, both of Toronto, survived the cut. Balding was at 138 with rounds of 68 and 70 while Knudson was at 140 with a pair of 70s.

"All of a sudden I just shut off like a faucet," Nicklaus said, referring to his hot first nine of 32 and wobbly last in which he was over par on three holes.

. . . CANADA

"I was cutting the corners too much," she said.

Jean-Claude Killy of Val d'Isere, France won the men's downhill Friday, and now will go after the triple in the giant and special slalom races.

The Canadian team did much better in skiing than it did in the speed skating and nordic skiiing events today.

In the women's 1,500 metres, a pair of Dutch girls finished second and third, and Canadians were 21st and 24th.

Carolina Geijssen took the silver medal with a time of 2:22.7 and world champion Stein Kaiser, who won the world metric mile championship last year, was third in 2:24.5.

Russia's Ludmilla Titova, winner of the 500-metre gold medal Thursday, was seventh today in 2:25.8.

In the men's 15-kilometre ski race at Autrans, Groenningen's gold medal was his first after being the "bridegroom" in two previous Olympics on three occasions.

FIGHT DUEL

The 33-year-old bachelor from Lensvik, Norway, fought a punishing duel with defending champion Eero Maentyranta of Finland to win by fewer than two seconds in 47:54.2.

Maentyranta's time was 47:56.1. The bronze went to Sweden's Gunnar Larson in 48:33.7.

None of the three Canadian entries cracked the top 30 in the rugged 9.2 mile event, long dominated by Russians and Scandinavians.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Another newcomer to list of award winners in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest is Ron Chamberlin, who topped men's fivepin division in 16th week. Employed at Dockyard, Ron rolled to top as he fashioned sizzling 323-339-270—932 series in Dockyard Mixed League at Gibson's Recreations.

BUT VIKINGS LOSE

Vikettes Unbeaten In Hoop Tourney

University of Victoria Vikings "blew" victory out the window in the final minute Friday, but the women's Vikettes created a more successful whirlwind in an invitational tournament at Edmonton.

Bob Bell's Vikings dropped a spine-tingling, 74-73 decision to Lewis and Clark College from Lewiston, Idaho, in a men's exhibition at the Gordon Head campus. The teams meet again tonight, starting at 8 p.m.

Vikings, down 36-35 at the half, obtained possession of the ball with 33 seconds remaining and trailing by one point. But Vikings failed to work their pattern and missed on the last-chance try.

In Edmonton, Wally Yeamans' girls were all smiles. They played four games, won four in the 10-team, round-robin tournament that winds up today. UBC Thunderettes won five.

Vikettes, playing two 10-minute periods, defeated Saskatchewan 18-9, Alberta 28-17, Calgary 37-15 and Brandon College 20-3. In today's games, Victoria was to play, in succession, Regina, UBC, Manitoba, Winnipeg and Lethbridge.

Marg Maysmith and Jean Robertson sparked Vikettes, scoring in every game. Miss Maysmith led the way with 29 points, including 16 against Calgary, while Miss Robertson finished the day with 20 points. Lyn Haaglund had 16 points, Marcia McIntyre 15 and Marg Woodley 13.

Visiting Rinks Dominate Spiel

Bermuda: Chilly Facts Amid the Glow

By MORRIS D. ROSENBERG

HAMILTON, Bermuda (WP) —Once upon a time there was a lovely little semi-tropical island.

Flowers were always blooming. Gentle waves rippled in quiet inlets and lapped ashore on pink, secluded beaches. Fishes waited hungrily for bait.

Orange, grapefruit and banana trees provided fresh fruit. From the clouds came water to drink. Limestone and coral rock easily shaped into blocks to build houses.

There were jobs for everyone who wanted to work—but no income tax, or property tax, or social security tax.

The island was named Bermuda (though many call it heaven and it still sits graciously with British aplomb in the Atlantic Ocean some 700 miles southwest of Washinton, about 250,000 tourists, 80 per cent of them Americans, visit it each year. A little over a week ago, my shoes flecked with the remains of a sloppy snowfall and my hands numbed by the frosty wind, I joined the crowd.

If you're looking for unhurried days, golf, tennis, sailing, fishing (May through November is best) and sightseeing in restful surroundings—and are willing to put up with merely cool temperatures to escape the deep freeze—then Bermuda may jolly well be your cup of winter tea.

But if you expect the kind of hot soothing sun that warms your bone marrow and seeps into a sleet-weary heart, better try the Caribbean.

Temperatures hovered around 59 degrees much of the three days I was there. The pool temperature was comfortable, but with a cold, damp breeze blowing in from the ocean under mostly cloudy skies, not too many hotel guests seemed keen on taking a dip. Beaches were virtually empty.

While the gulf stream performs a vital warming service, not even the Bermuda tourist office tries to disguise the chilly facts: "Between mid-November and mid-April, temperatures usually range from the low 70s to the low 60s, although in January, February and early March there are sometimes days when it goes lower."

Bermuda is charming, conservative (with a few miniskirts); unexciting, and (ignoring the opinion of honeymooners who make up about 25 per cent of the island's guests) sometimes boring.

Most of all, Bermuda is warm, friendly people.

The resident population now totals some 50,000 persons, which includes 5,000 United States servicemen stationed at the air force and naval bases there.

Bermudians come in many shades, with the colored vs. white ratio running about 60-40. Integration is continuing, and there is no major friction between races. Some are poor, but there are no slums. And you will find no beggars.

If such things bother you, you can spend your dollars without feeling you are helping to support a sinister dictator, and there are no sullen, restless natives enviously eyeing an oasis of rich foreigners.

July in Mexico: Learning in the Sun

Does your child have a problem learning Spanish? If so, better check with Barbara Hayes of Santa Barbara, California.

Some years back this ingenious mother of four was at wit's end when her two high school age sons were not getting the grades in Spanish she thought they should.

Her answer was to bundle the whole family off for a summer in Mexico. They took a small cottage and combined daily Spanish lessons with visits to Mexico's famous archeological sites.

When the boys returned home and told friends about their adventures, they all begged to be taken along the next summer.

This was nine years ago.

JULY IN MEXICO

Now, almost a decade later, Barbara Hayes and her July in Mexico group has been expanded into a summer adventure for 35 teenagers.

The carefully selected young people she takes along not only become adept in Spanish but, just as important, they come back with understandings and appreciations they couldn't get from school or books.

At her home in Hope Ranch, Mrs. Hayes plans each summer's tour with all the care and precision of the perfectionist she is.

The spacious hacienda where the group stays in Cuernavaca has to be made ready ... as do the swimming pool and playing courts; arrangements to attend bullfights and fiestas and festivals have to be made to insure good seats; the special tours in the group's air-conditioned bus to Acapulco, Taxco and Puebla have to be set up.

READY FOR GAMES

This year, with the 1968 Olympics being held in Mexico City, Mrs. Hayes is scheduling additional visits to the capital so the group can see the preparation for the pageantry and excitement of the games.

On an average day the kids get formal language teaching in the morning; while afternoons are given over to recreational activities that include everything from swimming to croquet. An evening visit to an art or music festival in town is usually on the agenda.

For youngsters who are having trouble with high school or college Spanish, or for those who want to develop proficiency in conversational Spanish, July in Mexico seems to be an excellent way to solve the problem.

GREAT FUN

Mrs. Hayes, a graduate of Stephens College and the University of Nebraska, and a noted school director in Santa Barbara, has had youngsters from practically every state along with her. Some come to polish their Spanish, others to browse around historical and cultural sites; others to attend all the art and music and dance festivals ... and some who just want to enjoy a summer in a different environment. Whatever their reasons, the boys and girls agree that it's a fun-filled trip.

Perhaps the most attractive part of July in Mexico is its low cost. For less than $600 the youngsters combine a tutorial Spanish program, visit historical and cultural sites, live in a spacious hacienda with gardens and a swimming pool, and enjoy food that would please the palate of a Mexican emperor.

IS THERE A CAMELOT?

King Arthur's Camelot has long existed in English literature and fable, and in the movies. But was it real?

A group of researchers who are digging up an 18-acre hillside at South Dadbury in Somerset, England, hope to answer that question.

South Cadbury is only a few miles southeast of the ancient town of Glastonbury, where King Arthur's tomb is located in Glastonbury Abbey. Only a mile away are two towns suggestively name West Camel and Queen Camel.

Tourist Sites Get Face-Lift

Some of London's most famous buildings—and most popular tourist sites—are getting a face-lift. Under a program directed by the Ministry of Public Buildings and Works, the marks of time and weather are being scrubbed away from the exteriors of such well-known landmarks as the National Gallery and Admiralty Arch. St. Paul's is almost finished.

Others that may soon face the clean-up squad include Burlington House, home of the Royal Academy of Arts; sections of the Royal Naval College, and the Tate Gallery.

Defence to Buy for Everyone

OTTAWA (CP) — Transformation of the defence production department into the primary federal purchasing agency will be completed in about a year, the Commons was told Friday.

Defence Production Minister Drury said the department already has taken over about 40 per cent of buying for civilian departments in addition to its responsibility for defence purchases.

Extension of the department's buying powers began in 1965 as a result of a money-saving recommendation by the Glassco royal commission on civil service reorganization.

A bill amending the Defence Production Act to broaden the department's powers was approved by the House after Mr. Drury outlined its expanded role.

The amendments increase to $250,000 from $25,000 the value of a purchase the department can make without cabinet approval. They also increase 10-fold to $500,000, the size of a purchase that can be made without cabinet approval where tenders are called and the lowest bid accepted.

The bill won speedy passage from MPs who earlier Friday passed amendments to the Territorial Lands Act, the Land Titles Act and the Public Lands Grants Act.

Northern Affairs Minister Laing said the changes will streamline procedures for buying Crown lands in the territories. They would reduce to a simple one-step operation a land registry procedure that now takes six to eight weeks.

Alvin Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle) said Ottawa must ensure that Indians and Eskimos, with "squatters' rights" around certain lakes and rivers, are not barred from such areas by establishment of private properties.

Arthur Mayse

Once in the low-population years when Gordon Head paid only casual attention to Saanich's ukase against the discharge of firearms, I tucked a .22 rifle under my arm and strolled down through our wildlands. In the middle of the trail, bold as sin and twice as ugly, sat the largest rat I ever saw in my life.

It traded me stare for stare and made chittering noises with its teeth while I fumbled a cartridge into the single-shot and took nervous aim. My luck was in, the marauder expired, and I went up for a spade and buried it deep.

Except for a rat that our tough black cat Cleo slew in mortal combat, we haven't seen another on our place. Her catship may be the reason why.

I'm told we're not too badly off in the matter of rats, but Vancouver, like most large seaports, is a ratty town. Wherever ships put in, Norvegicus Rattus steals ashore to find a mate and reproduce like crazy.

Metal guards on ships' lines are supposed to keep this unwanted immigrant from entering our province, and perhaps they do discourage the timid or the clumsy. But one dusk a couple of us watched a moving bulge on a mooring line approach one of these discs. There the shadows hid it; but just as we were about to turn away, we heard a distinct, small plop, and saw a V of ripples moving toward the dock pilings.

Whether he fell or jumped, I don't know, but that varmint was a capable swimmer.

Rattus, unpleasant customer that he is, remains almost exclusively a problem of our coastal plain.

The provincial pest control office scarce numbers him among its customers, which include bugs, pocket gophers, ground squirrels, the universal mouse, and other enemies of farmer and orchardist.

Rattus doesn't like mountains, and thanks to the Coast Range on the west and the Rockies and their subsidiary ranges to the eastward, the British Columbia interior is relatively free of his kind.

Alberta, with no ramparts to turn back the hordes that munch and scurry across woodland and plain from the East, is less fortunate.

Were it not for a vigorous control problem, our neighbor would be over-run by such an invasion as might make the Pied Piper himself flee for the hills.

The rat-battlers of Alberta's department of agriculture follow a policy of hitting the marauders hard and keeping after them, and the terms they employ will be all too familiar to anyone who follows the military pronouncements from Vietnam.

Using an anti-coagulant called warfarin as their weapon, they strive for a total kill that will leave no family survivors to repopulate and spread the work.

Rattus is fiendishly clever. Let him escape, and the alarm goes out: 'Lay off those plastic bags of rolled oats and icing sugar, boys! They're poison!"

The Alberta kill for a single year has run as high as a spine-prickling 80,000.

Last year, it sank to a mere 34,000, a cheering circumstance that prompted the head ratter to predict a time when North America will be free of the food-damaging and disease-spreading pests.

Possibly when mushrooming populations have gobbled all the food available for man and rat, that optimistic forecast will come true. But even then, I'm betting on Rattus. I dislike him intensely, but if any species survives, it will be his shrewd and hardly tribe!

Our own rat population (four-legged, that is) gets its wafarin from Metropolitan Board of Health, which reports very effective control in the municipalities it serves direct.

If you live in the outer areas including Saanich, and have rats, the Board will supply bait and advice on request.

Then begins a battle of wits — man against his ancient enemy—in which victory goes to the smartest.

SPLENDID SUN AND BOUNTIFUL SEA will bring Victorians into the fresh air in droves this weekend. Maybe its flirting with disaster to say it but the sweet smell of spring is here. Ken Hampson of 1606 Blair St. has that good-to-be-alive grin as he holds aloft mess of grilse, caught casting from shore off Ten Mile Point. Rocks will be lined with anglers after the pan-sized salmon. And at Clover Point instructor Rod Darby (right) has brought his night school deep sea navigation class outside for an essential lesson. "Shooting the sun" in their first try at handling sextant are (left to right) Arthur Snowball, George Dufour, Harold Ogden, Jeff Savage, Ralph Higgins and Anne Weir. No need to plot their "fix". Where else in Canada does spring arrive in February and give everybody that get-up-and-go feeling? (Bill Halkett Photos)

'CAN'T AFFORD IT'

Young 'Lured' To New Homes

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Labor Reporter

The provincial government's revamped house-acquisition program will make it "less possible" for young people to buy homes, a union official said today.

He was commenting on the discontinuance this summer of the $500 acquisition grant for purchase of older homes and doubling the grant for persons building new homes.

"I think a meaningful grant to reward these young people for buying older homes would be more effective," said John Schibli, president of the Victoria local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and secretary of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council.

As a result of the $1,000 offer on new houses only, young people will be "lured" into new houses "and find themselves loaded down with a $25,000 home."

"MORE VALID"

The original grant was more valid and could have been extended.

"The fellow who doesn't need the assistance is going to get it," he said.

From Vancouver, prominent realtor Henry Block of Block Brothers said the $1,000 grant "won't be of much help to the person who is earning $7,000 and less, the people who need to be helped."

However, Jim McLaren, president of the Victoria Home Builders Association, said the $1,000 "will be a definite asset to those who are trying to build a house. Obviously it will make down payments less."

The old scheme paid $500 outright to B.C. residents buying a house for the first time.

New legislation introduced Friday will make the same $500 payment to persons whose homes now are under construction or who enter into agreements to buy existing homes before March 31. Persons who agree to buy homes between April 1 and July 1 will get $525.

The $1,000 will be paid outright to first-time buyers who start building on and after today. People who have collected less than $1,000 in homeowner grants will be able to qualify for the difference between the homeowner grant total and the new $1,000 grant.

The $525 acquisition grant for existing homes will end July 1.

EMERGENCY TRACHEOTOMY SAVES CHILD

A 14-month-old child is in good condition today after Saanich ambulance took him to hospital for an emergency tracheotomy.

Mrs. Maurice Gauthier, 4057 Gordon Head Road, ran to a neighbor's home Friday when she discovered her child Lance was having difficulty breathing.

A Saanich police car and ambulance were dispatched and the boy was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital. Oxygen was administered on the way.

POPPING UP from pot-hole long enough to distribute buttons to provincial cabinet ministers Friday was Port McNeill's Gerry Furney. Campaigning for better roads, Mr. Furney was here to hand out some of the 1,000 buttons printed to read "Non Potholorum Carborundum"—or, don't let the pot-holes get you down.

By PAUL MUSGROVE

The galloping ghosts of "Gaglardi's Gap" have been and gone, leaving in their wake buttons, briefs and limericks.

Spearheading the raid was Gerry Furney, spokesman for the Associated Chambers of Commerce of North Vancouver Island.

Their brief has been presented to Premier Bennett along with a hefty supply of limericks, the northerners' greatest weapon.

The Gap is serviced by private ferry once or twice a day and the cost is $17.50 one way for a car with driver. The trip is a four-hour run, comparable in miles to the run between Nanaimo and Horseshoe Bay.

"Most people don't realize that when you arrive in Kelsey Bay you are only two-thirds of the way up the Island," Mr. Furney said.

There are more than 10,000 persons on the northern tip of the Island and smaller outlying islands.

"These are the real pioneers," Mr. Furney stated. "And these same people are driving around up there on gravel roads unfit for ox-carts."

A highway built to the Trans-Canada standard right to Port Hardy would cost $12,000,000. It has been promised by various governments for 50 years.

Mr. Furney said it was this golden promise that first got settlers into the area shortly after the turn of the century. By 1927 more than 1,000 lived in the San Josef-Cape Scott area. A government bridge was built and the settlers started work on a corduroy road.

Closing "Gaglardi's Gap" would enable the Queen of Prince Rupert to leave from Port Hardy, avoiding 60 miles of the most "hazardous going," and saving about $1,000,000 dollars annually in operating costs, Mr. Furney said.

The north Islanders, however, admit their poor roads have led to one asset which they have proclaimed in yet another limerick:

"Port McNeill girls are
prettier than most,
Of their beauty we really
must boast.
Their magnificent rumps
Are caused by the bumps
On the roads up the North
Island Coast."

$4 Million in Projects Await Thaw by Gov't

School Board Stymied

By DON VIPOND
Education Reporter

School construction in Greater Victoria "hung up" by the provincial government has passed the $4 million mark.

School board chairman Peter Bunn said today there are now 16 projects only requiring department of education approval before tenders are called.

With the plans for an addition to Victoria West elementary school delivered to the department Friday the estimated value of pending school building reached $4,150,600.

The department has had one set of plans since last Aug. 23.

"We're completely stymied by the failure of the provincial government to give us permission to go to tender," said Mr. Bunn.

MAJOR WORRIES

Trustees face two major worries:

"First, we are not going to have enough school facilities for the children next September.

"And second, if the freeze is continued for a sustained period, we won't be able to get these buildings for the estimated cost. With cost increases we will be priced out of the market."

Last May ratepayers in Greater Victoria approved a three-year school building program of $13 million.

So far, said Mr. Bunn, 20 per cent of the time has past but only 6 per cent of the building plans have been approved.

ESTIMATED COSTS

Referendum figures were based on estimated construction costs at a point half way through the three-year program. Trustees fear that by the time plans are approved, actual costs will have soared past estimates.

The school board chairman said Premier Bennett's budget increases for education appear only able to take care of normal increase in education costs.

"It would seem there is no increase in the basic grant formula to provide relief to the individual taxpayer."

Until the education funds are allocated on a local level, it's impossible to see the picture here, he added.

HERE ARE 16 SCHOOLS AFFECTED BY 'FREEZE'

The 16 "frozen" Greater Victoria school building projects awaiting department of education approval to call tenders:

Bank Street elementary school: $237,000 addition for four classrooms, a library and the second half of an activities room.

Hampton elementary school: $96,800 for three classrooms, a kindergarten, library and staff room.

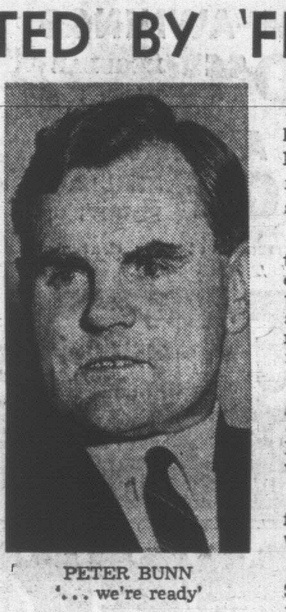
Hillcrest elementary school: $294,000 for four classrooms, two kindergartens, a special room, library, the second half of an activity room and an administration area.

Macaulay elementary school: $2,359,000 for six classrooms, a kindergarten, library and a special room.

McKenzie elementary school: $200,000 for three classrooms, two kindergartens, a library, dressing rooms

Monterey elementary school: $370,000 for five classrooms, one special room, a library, an activity room, adminstration room and to renovate the 1912 heating plant.

Richmond elementary school: $250,000 for eight more classrooms.



PETER BUNN
'. . . we're ready'

Quadra elementary school: $181,000 for six classrooms, a kindergarten, library, enlarged activity room, staff room and renovating heating system.

Sir James Douglas elementary school: $215,000 for three classrooms, two kindergartens, a special room, library and renovations to the administrative and wash-room facilities.

Rockheights elementary school: $224,000 for seven classrooms, a special room, library, change rooms and washrooms.

Reynolds junior secondary: $560,000 for 10 more classrooms, three laboratories, six special rooms for such subjects as drafting and shop, extensions to work shop and library.

Victoria West elementary school: $674,000 for 14 more classrooms, an administrative centre, a library, an activity room, dressing rooms, washrooms and heating operation.

FORMER MUSEUM WORKER PLEADS GUILTY

'I Didn't Have the Nerve' To Return Indian Relics

Robert Nichols, 58, of 730 Humboldt, will be held in jail until he returns for sentence Feb. 19.

He admitted Friday taking a copper Indian ceremonial mask worth $1,000 and a buckskin bag containing 56 Indian gambling sticks valued at $250, both the property of the Anglican Synod of B.C.

In a second count Nichols pleaded guilty to taking $1,315 in Indian artifacts, including knives and more gambling sticks, the property of the Provincial Museum.

The accused was employed as a field agent, charged with collecting Indian relics, between Sept. 1, 1965, and March 1 of last year, court was told.

SOLD MASK

Detective Walter Calwell said Nichols sold the mask and a quantity of his own artifacts to the Riveredge Foundation in Calgary for $4,500.

"I didn't need the money and had no intention of stealing," said the accused.

He said he took some of the items home to clean, repair and conduct research on the and when his employment terminated, "I didn't have the nerve to take it back."

He was not familiar with relics of the Northwest coastal tribes and had no idea of the value of the mask, he said.

He wanted the gambling sticks to study the individual designs on them.

The ancient mask and one set of the gambling sticks had been turned over to the museum by the Anglican church for cataloguing when they were taken.

All the missing articles have been recovered.

New Recruit Joins Art Colony Living on Salt Spring Island

By ELSIE WORTHINGTON

A lively little lady, whose vitality and zest for living belie her 84 years, staged an art show at Ganges that drew enthusiastic comments from a large number of viewers.

Bessie Fry Smyons, well-known British Columbia artist and teacher of art for many years in New Westminster, has recently moved to Salt Spring Island from Read Island, near Campbell River. She is building a new home on Church Road in Ganges.

Mrs. Symons enjoys people. "I want to meet my neighbors and get to know people on Salt Spring," she said. The one-day show was held for this purpose. Salt Spring Island has a sizeable group of artists and Mrs. Symons was anxious to meet them.

Paintings were displayed in the main lounge, fireside room and foyer of Harbor House Hotel in Ganges, during the afternoon and evening of January 31. There were 36 of Mrs. Symons' works on view, chiefly water colors and pastels. "I was surprised to find how few I have left," said the artist. "The others have been sold or given away." Some of Mrs. Symons' new friends on Salt Spring are proud owners of her paintings.

The restrained, vibrant, personality of the artist is reflected in the firm lines and judicious use of strong colors in her deceptively quiet work. This was particularly evident in the portrayal of a sleepy village at the foot of Whistler Mountain at Jasper.

Recent newcomer to Salt Spring Island, 84-year-old Bessie Fry Symons is seen with some of her painting s. (Driftwood, Ganges.)

"March in Victoria," depicting red and pink flowering trees in front of an old house, gave a distant feeling of beauty basking in sunshine, yet braced to meet chill March winds.

Flowers were there, too, in glowing colors and graceful form. A bowl of double bright pink poppies against an entrancing silver-blue background brought the delightful reminder that spring is only weeks away.

There were several charming paintings of Ganges Harbor and the village. These were done in the short time that Mrs. Symons had been on Salt Spring. When the artist came to Ganges a few months ago it was a case of love at first sight. She has become firmly attached to the village. "Ganges is a very pretty place," she said, "One of the few really lovely villages I have seen."

Mrs. Symons will find a warm welcome among Salt Spring Island's expanding colony of artists. Right now she is busy preparing for a display of her work to be held soon in Vancouver at the British Columbia Gallery of Art.

Plan Luncheon In Auditorium

The Ladies' Auxiliary to St. Joseph's Hospital will hold a bridge luncheon on Wednesday, Feb. 21. The affair will commence at 11:30 a.m. and will be held in the nurses' auditorium. Newcomers to Victoria Scene

The Cuthill family voted unanimously to head west when Mr. David Cuthill recently retired as the federal postmaster on the Royal Canadian Air Force base at Gimli, Man. In spite of snow and rain, they all agree the vote was a right one. Mr. and Mrs. Cuthill now live at 1320 Point Street. They're seen with their children, Edwina, who attends Victoria Senior Secondary School; Cameron, who's enrolled in Sir James Douglas School, and Camillia, who is an attractive member of the city's career girl set.

General S. (Findlay) Clark and Mrs. Clark haven't had an idle moment since they left Ottawa and headed for the coast. Currently on retirement leave from the Canadian army, General Clark was chairman of the National Capital Commission for the past six years. Previous to that he was chief of general staff. The Clarks keep busy remodelling the home they've bought at 3180 Midland Road while their 14-year-old Labrador, Monty, enjoys his daily sorties in the Clarks' garden. The trio is seen in front of a painting of the general, painted by the well-known Toronto artist, Cleeve Horne. Summer plans include cruising in their 28-foot power cruiser which they had shipped from the east.

The concept that Victoria is a tight little town where everyone knows everyone is as "old hat" as the bobby helmets that Victoria policemen discarded in 1948.

Each year, the city's population figures grow, fed by hundreds of new residents who settle here to enjoy the climate, the warmth of acceptance by their neighbors, and scenery which has inspired poets and artists for decades. Some come to enjoy their retirement years, others are brought here by business. All add to the flavor of our city, enriching it with new talents and attitudes developed by years spent in many parts of the world.

On this page are seen five of the many new families that now call Victoria home. Diverse as their backgrounds are, they all have something in common. Each has already fallen under the spell of a city which blends the old and new in complete harmony.

Akshai, the young son of Dr. and Mrs. Mansingh, will celebrate his fourth birthday this month. He's also celebrating a new home and way of life. He and his parents recently came from Belleville, Ont., and now live at 1725 Howroyd Avenue. Dr. Mansingh is a research scientist with the federal department of forestry.

Enthusiastic Texans, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Franklin, thought that their state's hospitality was unbeatable until their arrival in Victoria. Says Mrs. Franklin, "It sure can't match the brand of hospitality we've met here!" They now live in the Lord Simcoe Apartments. Mr. Franklin is an inspector with the firm of Arthur G. McKee. They hope they'll be here for at least a year before they have to head for their home in Texas City. They have two children. Richard Eugene Franklin is a design engineer with Boeing Aircraft in Seattle and their daughter, Mrs. Douglas W. (Beverly Diane) Harley lives with her family in Houston, Texas.

It was just like coming home for Mr. J. P. Crow, at left, when he and his family set out for Victoria after he recently retired as manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia's branch in Star City, Sask. His parents lived here and the family has been making trips to Victoria since 1946. Mr. and Mrs. Crow live at 1636 Pinewood Avenue. They're seen with their daughter, Catherine, and their son, Lieut. Brian Crow, RCE, who was here on a visit from Gagetown, N.B. The Crows have two other sons, Lt.-Cmdr. Clifford Crow of Halifax, N.S., and J. Murray Crow of Hamilton, Ont.

Ruffled Curl hairstyles deliciously feminine . . .

What's the latest word in hairstyling for spring? It's the Ruffled Curl Look . . . and we heard all about it from Danny Hajnal, whose House of Glamour is all geared to create this romantic, delightfully feminine look for Victoria women . . . As you may have guessed, this new look combines softly ruffled hair with light, airy ringlet curls (these latter could be pin-ons, if you just want them for evening) . . . In any case, no two Ruffled Curl hairstyles are alike in design detail . . . they're created for each individual woman . . . and start with a very special Ruffle cut . . . followed by a shadow of a permanent . . . Hair is comparatively short, with a slight rise at the back, tapering down to follow the natural contour of the head . . . All styles are light, airy, and artfully casual . . . calculated to bring out the prettiest in any woman . . . New hair colors are what they call "ice cream tones," in the blond spectrum . . . rich, creamy shades with delicate darker touches to accent the ruffles . . . Why not be one of the first to achieve this "new look" for spring? . . . And do try H of G's new hair spray called Glamour Spray . . . It's formulated especially for Victoria weather conditions . . . and it's terrific! . . . House of Glamour, 658 View St., 386-6188.

Even if you don't wear very short skirts you'll love the look . . . and comfort . . . of panty hose.

A fragrant Valentine . . .

No woman is ever too young . . . or too old . . . to appreciate a gift of fine perfume . . . and in our book, it's the Valentine par excellence! . . . Gives a woman that lovely cherished feeling we all adore . . . pays the supreme compliment to our femininity! . . . If you suspect your spouse may be thinking along these lines come next Wednesday . . . St. Valentine's Day . . . you might very subtly hint to him that Douglas Pharmacy is THE place in Victoria to find practically every perfume known to man . . . many of which you simply can't obtain anywhere else . . . We asked Mr. Wong how many kinds he has . . . and he said he was almost afraid to count . . . but at least 50 different lines of perfumes from many countries . . . The latest one in . . . for which he has had many requests . . . is Corday from France, three lovely fragrances . . . "Toujours Moi," "Possession" and "Fame" . . . comes in perfume, cologne and a special cologne lotion . . . perfume priced from $4.75 to $7.50. The Picot line, from England, is also new and exclusive . . . "Suede" and "Pagan" fragrances . . . as are the Jacques Fath perfumes "Fath de Fath" . . . a heady spicy fragrance, and "Fath's Love" . . . a light floral scent redolent of springtime . . . Douglas Pharmacy carry the complete line of Christian Dior . . . plus 'most anything else you can think of . . . For fine perfumes, it's . . . Douglas Pharmacy, 1672 Douglas St., 385-1541.

Everything goes merrily along at Wilson's . . .

Despite all we've been reading . . . we honestly thought Wilson's would be in a bit of a shambles what with the store being turned upside down and all during their extensive renovations . . . so picture our amazement when we went in the other day and found it just about the most un-shambled place imaginable! . . . Ladies' department unruffled and serene in its usual spot . . . ditto men's furnishings . . . Only men's clothing has moved downstairs temporarily . . . and everything there is neat as a pin, too! . . . Getting back to ladies' dept. . . . it's full of fresh and colorful new clothes . . . When we were in they were just unpacking some new Carriage Trade dresses of soft Italian silk . . . Two different styles in lovely print designs and delectable colors . . . Two things we noticed particularly . . . colors, while gay enough for anyone, are more subtle than they used to be . . . and the dresses themselves . . . while beltless, have more shape, curving in at the sides very gently . . . Both styles have long sleeves, and are utterly feminine . . . One has a cross-over collar built right into the dress . . . the other has a tie-over collar and cuffed sleeves . . . Saw some nice new raincoats too imported from Holland . . . dark red, green, blue and navy . . . They're smartly tailored . . . light-weight . . . washable . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Transparency is the word in make-up for 1968. (Achieve it with gleamers).

Romantic wedding gowns for the spring bride . . .

We'd just finished perusing the latest issue of "Modern Bride" with its spring preview of wedding dresses . . . before visiting Miss Frith's Bridal Salon the other day, and what do you think? We actually saw gorgeous examples of every single one of the lovely new styles right there before our very eyes! . . . Talk about romantic wedding gowns! . . . Peau de soie, peau d'elegance, organza, organdy, Paloma crepe . . . much lace trimming . . . sweeping trains . . . Many with graceful long sleeved coats covering a simple sleeveless dress . . . Others with detachable trains . . . There's an elegant simplicity of line about many of these gowns . . . with their very new necklines . . . that put us in mind of the Lily Maid of Astrolat . . . the golden age of chivalry . . . knights of the Round Table and their lovely ladies! . . . One beautiful organza gown is panelled and trimmed with lace . . . comes complete with matching lace-trimmed veil and crown headpiece . . . a lovely thing if ever we saw one! . . . There's a princess-like gown with Chantilly lace organza A-line skirt and lace overskirt falling into its own train . . . A graceful Empire silhouette with Chantilly lace bodice over an organza sheath skirt . . . Delightful dresses for the bridesmaids too . . . Be sure to visit the Bridal Salon at . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Arthur Murray's anniversary gift . . .

Well, we're all set to see some new dancing trophies at Arthur Murray's . . . because this weekend, in Vancouver, there's a big dance competition going on for Arthur Murray pupils from all over Canada . . . and our good friend Gisele Van . . . who owns the local studio . . . is there with several of her pupils who are competing in this much-anticipated event . . . So-o . . . good luck Victoria! . . . What will interest you even more, though . . . if you'd like to learn to dance . . . or become a better dancer than you are . . . is the really terrific offer the Arthur Murray Studio is making right now in celebration of their 54th anniversary . . . Ten dancing lessons (5 private and 5 group) . . . for a mere $10 . . . You can learn any of the popular dances you choose . . . fox trot, waltz, rumba, swing, tango, cha-cha, merengue, samba . . . even the latest discotheque dances . . . And now hear this . . . Arthur Murray's are so sure you can learn the basic steps in from three to six dances in this 10-lesson period . . . that they'll return your money if you're not satisfied . . . Kidding? Not a bit of it . . . just try them and see! . . . You'll learn to become a good dancer with the greatest of ease . . . and have a wonderful time in the process . . . Call . . . Arthur Murray School of Dancing, 715 Yates St., 385-1476.

New arrivals at M & E . . .

Smart young women in-the-know are keeping a pretty sharp eye on the Madam and Eve Shop these days . . . so as not to miss seeing any of the constantly-arriving new clothes for spring . . . and believe us, you need to be johnny-on-the-spot if you don't want to miss out on something good! . . . This week we saw some new arrivals from Gordi . . . Suits and dress and coat ensembles we consider quite stunning! . . . Some all-wool "candy mix" tailored suits with pleated skirts, in color combinations of pink, purple, green and yellow . . . and blue, green, tangerine and orange . . . Gay little suits for all-round wear . . . A couple of others, in gray or beige wool, have mandarin collars, welt seam detailing and A-line skirts with an unusual panel effect in front achieved with the welt seaming . . . Welt seaming also lends terrific smartness to the royal wool coat and dress ensemble . . . Double breasted coat with high fashion lapels . . . A-line dress with mandarin collar . . . made without bust darts but with seaming detail which carries down the front and continues in back . . . same seaming on coat . . . This one comes in oyster too . . . There's a darling canary yellow dress, simply and beautifully cut . . . And incidentally, if you happen to live Up-Island . . . you'll find these Gordi outfits in Wilson's Nanaimo store . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

If you're sixty-plus . . . aim for prettiness rather than stark chic in your clothes. Much more flattering.

Sweets to the sweet . . .

For the sweetest Valentine ever . . . give your love a box of those delicious chocolates from Welch's . . . the surest way we know to really satisfy the inner woman! . . . We stood riveted in front of Welch's window this week admiring the beautiful heart-shaped boxes chock-full of Welch's own delectable chocolates and candies . . . They range in size from little heart boxes at 85c to big beauties, lavishly adorned with flowers and ribbons, and priced from $1.95 to $13.95 . . . Mostly red, but if that's not her favorite color, there are gold, pink and blue ones too . . . After the contents have been enjoyed, the boxes will be treasured as receptacles for everything from handkerchiefs to jewellry . . . The youngsters of the family will be ecstatic over the milk chocolate hearts . . . 39c . . . candy suckers, also heart-shaped . . . or if they prefer their sweets in quantity, Valentine jelly gums in oh-so-good fruit flavors . . . and red and white jelly beans so beloved by all small fry (we like 'em too) . . . And of course there's always the regular boxes and choose-your-own selection of Welch's chocolates and candies . . . some 50 varieties of fresh, toothsome sweets to please everyone of every age . . . Remember Valentine's Day . . . Give Welch's . . . Welch's Candy Shop, 755 Fort St., 383-6422.

Fashion at the Fair . . . the World Fair taking place in San Antonio from April 6 to October 6 is inspiring Texas designers to create clothes that will appeal to women all over the world. The easy elegance of Miller-Randazzo is used in a time-spanning two-piece suit. The intriguing, square print is woven in 100 per cent Texan cotton.

In Step With Style

TEXAS TO HOST MAMMOTH FAIR

By Nona Damaske

Next month the eyes of the fashion world will be focused on San Antonio. The Texas Fashion Creators' Association will hold its National Press Week for fashion editors in San Antonio early in March.

Damaske

The Texas collections are usually shown in Dallas but the Fashion Creators wished to share the colors, patterns and unique flavor of HemisFair '68 with visiting editors. The fair will not officially open until early in April but all will be in readiness for advance tours next month.

Texas is the third largest apparel market in the nation and fashion will play an important part in the HemisFair '68. The lazy curve of San Antonio's river . . . the precise angles of brick walls . . . the brilliant blossoms of HemisFair's gardens . . . all will be echoed in Texas Fashion Collections of bright sportswear for 1968.

HemisFair '68 is the first major international world's fair ever held in the Southwest. It is a six-month fiesta celebrating San Antonio's 250th birthday.

Over 7,000,000 people are expected to join the festivities and its stands to reason that we will hear a great deal about the fashions of America's second-largest state.

"Texas Cottons Fashioned to a HemisFair Thee-Well," will feature Texas designs executed in cotton. The brightened colors of HemisFair '68 will be used in a group of playclothes which will echo patterns of the first world's fair in the southwest.

Fashion shows will be held in the revolving restaurant atop the HemisFair Tower of the Americas. The tower, at 622 feet, will be 16 feet taller than Seattle's Space Needle.

Texas Fashion Creator's Association was formed in 1942 by Texas apparel and related manufacturers to effectively co-ordinate the promotion of the fashion industry.

About 150 press representatives are expected in San Antonio to view and report on the southwest's fashion industry.

Art Gallery Women Plan Novel Party

The Women's Committee to the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria is planning an unusual party for men and women, designed to encourage interest in and knowledge of the Gallery.

The party, called "Hearts and Flowers," will take place at the gallery next Friday evening at 8 p.m. Bridge and other card games will be played. Sandwiches will be served, also wine and beer.

This is a new venture for the committee and members hope that committee members, Gallery members and their friends will be joined by many who have not yet had an opportunity to view the various collections at the Gallery.

Those interested should phone the Gallery at 384-3123 for reservations and tickets. Women interested in the work of the committee should phone its president, Mrs. Robin Skelton, at 477-3118 for further information.

Convener of Friday's party is Mrs. Jim Plecash. Refreshments are being arranged by Mrs. M. Anderson and Mrs. D. Roberts. Mrs. Peter Banks will arrange the floral decorations.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Sloppy Housewife Take Heed!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My wife is very careless about her appearance in the privacy of our home. She gets breakfast barefoot in her nightgown with her hair uncombed, which is not very pretty. She knows better and can make herself strikingly beautiful if we're having guests or going out. It hurts to know she won't bother to make herself presentable for me.

Divorce is out because of the children, but believe me, it's crossed my mind. I start off my day in anger and disgust, and my mind (and eye) have begun to roam. She reads your column, Abby, so maybe if you print this, she'll see it, recognize herself and take the hint. Thank you.

HER HUSBAND

DEAR HUSBAND: I'll print it, but don't expect miracles. When something as important as one's marriage is at stake, the man who waits for his wife to read something in a newspaper column, "recognize herself and take the hint," may need more help than his wife. Lay it on the line, man, lay it on the line. Maybe she thinks YOU don't care how she looks.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I recently were guests for dinner at the home of some well-to-do friends. There were five couples altogether.

The hostess called us to the table with this remark, "Soup I have only for the gentlemen." For dessert they served only coffee and some small squares of commercially-baked cake.

When I complained later to my host about the inadequate meal he replied, "In North America it is customary for the guest to be satisfied with what the host offers him." I would like your opinion of such "hospitality."

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: To be "satisfied" with whatever is offered in the way of hospitality is universal— not "American." I would be more critical of a "complaining guest" than an inadequate dinner. I happen to believe that it is what's on the CHAIRS, not what's on the TABLE that makes a successful dinner party.

DEAR ABBY: I am 52, but nobody takes me for a day over 40. After 27 years of marriage my husband decided he wanted a divorce, so I gave it to him. It was a blow to my pride, but the kids were all married and on their own, and I lived through it.

Children love me and pets adore me. There isn't a dog I can't make friends with. Older men find me fascinating. I can get any man over 70 by snapping my fingers, but I can't seem to attract a man my own age. I have money in the bank, nice clothes, and a steady income. To get to the point, I want a man. What's wrong with me?

WANTS A MAN

DEAR WANTS: The only thing "wrong" with a woman who wants a man is that everybody knows it —especially the men she wants. Be yourself, act your age, and broaden your contacts if you want to change your luck.

DEAR ABBY: What happens to a girl who dreams of being kissed passionately, but when a fellow tries to kiss her she won't let him?

DREAMER

DEAR DREAMER: Nothing.

Every Woman May Now Quickly

To Herself: HE FORGETS I AM 55!

Lift Her Face Out Of Winter Lines, Wrinkles and Aging Dryness
. . . thanks to the "Wiesbaden Discovery" CEF-600
Helps Every Complexion Regain and Retain The Younger Look by Immediately Counteracting Effects of Winter's Icy Grip

No matter if your skin is typed dry, normal or even oily . . . no matter whether you enjoy being outdoors or prefer indoor protection . . . both frigid arctic air and overheated dry rooms dehydrate, drain skin of water and deprive it of the necessary moisture that pushes skin up and out to keep it as smooth, firm and wrinkle-free as the day you were married. And now, during the social season, when you particularly want to look your youngest best, "old man winter" works overtime to dry out and make your skin on face and neck flabby, sagging, rough, chapped and weatherbeaten. You look and feel years older than your age. And your husband . . . it makes him feel older too!

Your Chance for a Quicker Winter Youth
Medical journals have acclaimed the "Wiesbaden Discovery" known scientifically as CEF-600 and now embodied as the active ingredient in the cosmetic-like lotion named "2ND DEBUT." Apply "2ND DEBUT" nightly before retiring and daily before make-up. Day and night, it is constantly carrying water into the skin . . . counteracting all the skin drying effects of outside cold and inside overheating that chaps, dries, wrinkles your skin and makes it sag.

How 2ND DEBUT Works Quickly
Once again skin is moisturized, fresh, dewey radiant. Once again those aging lines and wrinkles are pushed up and out. Once again skin on face and throat is smoother and years younger in appearance. No matter how weather beaten your complexion may be, a youth-like color glows from within. Your complexion seems to have been born beautiful. Only 2ND DEBUT can bring about this fantastic skin youthifying miracle . . . in spite of winter's drying action!

For Extra Dry Skin— Or Mi-Lady In A Hurry— 2ND DEBUT With Double Strength CEF 1200
New DOUBLE STRENGTH 2ND DEBUT contains CEF 1200 instead of CEF 600. It acts much faster to smooth and flatten skin made scaly by winter's icy grip . . . and it works quicker to push up and out the more deeply seated lines and wrinkles.

Important To Regular Users of 2ND DEBUT
Particularly in these winter months, in time will your skin revert to the lined and wrinkled condition it was, unless you keep using 2ND DEBUT day and night. Your skin is constantly exfoliating . . . old skin flakes off and away and new skin is constantly being born. In winter weather it is more important than ever that you keep applying 2ND DEBUT before retiring and before make-up if you want to retain your soft, smooth youthful looking complexion. Users of 2ND DEBUT with CEF 600 are urged to switch to 2ND DEBUT with CEF 1200 . . . double strength and to use it all winter long.

HAD TO LEAVE QUEBEC TO KNOW PROBLEMS

Andre Fortin, Lise Vallieres and Marie-Rose Pellerin are teaching for a year in Victoria under the sponsorship of the Victoria Branch of the League of the Commonwealth. While they are here, three Victoria teachers are at Montreal schools. They are A. R. McKenzie, Gerry Cockburn and Maria Mathieu, who are former faculty members of the schools in which the visitors now teach.

By PAT DUFOUR

If you want to learn about Quebec's problems the best place to find out is British Columbia.

This is the impression gained by three French-speaking teachers from Montreal who are here for a year as exchange teachers under a plan sponsored by the Victoria Branch of the League of the Commonwealth.

Andre Fortin is the male member of the trio. The others are Mlle. Marie-Rose Pellerin and Mlle. Lise Vallieres.

They report, "Everyone here discusses problems that we didn't know existed in our province. We've heard more about Johnson and Trudeau since we've been here than we ever did before."

The visitors feel that part of the Victorians' concern about Quebec stems from the absence of problems in this area.

Says Andre, "We think this must be the unique city of Canada. There are so few problems that people worry themselves about little things. I know one lady who won't leave her home because she refuses to leave her dog alone or put him in kennels!"

Lise joins in with, "Here, everyone talks about air pollution. In Montreal it's so polluted that we gave up worrying anything about it years ago."

All are agreed that they have a better understanding of the English-speaking Canadian than they did when they left Montreal last August. But they still have difficulties.

Says Marie-Rose, "The English-Canadian is very different from the French-Canadien. Their habits and humor are different. It's hard to know what they're thinking . . . it's a guessing game."

HAS EIGHT CLASSES

Marie-Rose teaches at Central Junior Secondary School, instructing French to eight classes of grade eight and grade 10 students.

She reports that the rest of the faculty treat her as one of themselves. She wishes they didn't. "We are different, and this should be understood."

Andre reports a different reaction. "The teachers at Oak Bay Junior Secondary School treated me as if I was different from the start. We get along well together. In addition to my work at the school, I now hold a class for teachers one night a week. There's always at least 12 teachers there." He's applied to stay here another year.

He also says that there are several teachers in the Greater Victoria area who speak good French. "They have very good accents," he adds.

Although their sponsoring group has been active in promoting social events for the visitors, the two women feel that this is not enough.

Marie-Rose shrugs her shoulders and says, "Sure we're invited to teas and other formal things. But, after that, what? Often Lise and I stay in our apartment for a week, seeing nobody but ourselves."

Lise adds, "We miss our family and friends. Knowing that you're only here for a year also makes it difficult. If we were more permanent, we would probably try much harder."

All admit that they came to British Columbia with less than a masterful command of the English language.

JOKES POSE PROBLEMS

Andre remembers, "It was hard to communicate at first. I'd watch people's eyes and lips, everything, in order to try to carry on a good conversation. The worst part was jokes. We French-Canadiens like to joke, but by the time you've interpreted something into another language it loses its punch. Also, what we find funny may not be the case with the English-speaking Canadian."

He says that his pupils were most polite when he started at the school. "Now that we know each other better, they correct my English pronunciation in return for my criticism."

The trio agrees that Victoria students are easier to discipline than the ones they taught in Montreal. Says Marie-Rose, "In a big city like Montreal they're just like their surroundings, go, go, go!"

Andre delights in the sports activities of Victoria students. "Nobody has to prod them into sports. In Montreal it is different."

Lise agrees, "In Montreal, the students expend all their energy in the classrooms." She adds that her students at Oak Bay Senior Secondary School are always polite.

Andre admits to a sense of inferiority when it comes to physical fitness. "Here I am only 25 and everyday I see Victoria men who look much fitter at 40!"

Although they receive larger salaries in Victoria, the trio feels there are disadvantages in the working conditions.

Marie-Rose misses the Montreal ruling which limits classes to 30 students. "It's hard work when you have large classes. Also, we have less free periods here. In Montreal, we have enough to do our paperwork at school. You never have to carry it home to finish."

Andre compares the staff of Oak Bay Junior Secondary School with a school teaching a similar number of students in Montreal. "Here there are 46 on staff, including clerical workers. In Montreal, you'll find 72 teachers on the faculty."

The three exchange teachers expected to find Victoria much larger than they did. Says Marie-Rose, "Montreal is built on an island, too. I expected Victoria to be just as large."

They'd been told by many Montrealers that Victoria was one of the most beautiful cities in Canada. They think it is. But, says Marie-Rose, "It's something special. Here, you feel that you're not really part of the world."

All agree that they would like to serve in more schools in English-speaking areas.

Charming Bracelet Solves Gift Problem

By Penny Saver

I knew that there was a birthday coming up in my family, but I couldn't remember who it belonged to or the exact date. I used to keep careful records of all these things, marking it down in a little book each time a friend or relative had a new child. This record went the way of all records—it still lies in a drawer but the gaps in the list even extend to my own children! It took much consultation with my husband and mother to discover that my missing birthday belonged to a niece and that it was frighteningly close.

The girl, Mary, is my brother's child and she will be 11 this coming week. Since her family lives in Vancouver I know very little about the way Mary dresses or what her interests are. My mother announced somewhat smugly that she had read my column and bought Mary some bright-colored stockings. That was the very gift I had hoped to buy for her and as mailing made my shopping time shorter, I rushed downtown to start my search.

There was no need to hurry. The first shop I went into provided me with the perfect gift—a charm bracelet. I decided to start Mary with a sterling silver bracelet. These cost $3.50. This is the same price as an attractive gold-fill bracelet but the charms themselves are more suited to her pocketbook. A solid gold bracelet is very expensive, starting at $20, and the gold charms are equally expensive, although lovely.

To start Mary collecting I bought her a worry bird charm. This is a tiny bird (so far as I can tell he must be a cross between an emu and a new-born chicken), with the inscription, "Let me do your worrying." From his expression I gather that he began worrying for Mary immediately in the past, present and future. This comforting little stirling silver charm comes in two sizes, a small bird for $3.25 and the larger bird for $4.75.

I was intrigued by the many moveable charms that the shop had. In general, sterling charms are priced from $2.25 to $5; the moveable charms because of their intricacy are in the higher price range. Some of my favorites were a basket cradle that opens to show the baby inside and a bird that lifts off its nest to reveal its eggs. A silver apple opened to show Adam and Eve, while a pirate chest contained a miniature treasure. Gold charms begin at $6.50 and can go as high as $40.

While I was buying the charm bracelet I noticed an egg-cup made of stainless steel with a matching spoon. The tiny spoon, just the perfect size for exploring the inside of an egg, has the image of a saint on the handle. The egg-cup is the classical egg-cup design. A set of egg-cup and spoon is $1.95 while a set of two is $3.50. I am keeping these in mind for shower and wedding presents.

If you would like to know where I shopped please call me at 382-3131.

Working Girls Will Meet Commission

OTTAWA (CP) — The royal commission on the status of women is going to make sure the working girl has an opportunity to present her opinions at its hearings across Canada this year.

Mrs. John Bird, chairman, said this week the royal commission will be the first to hold some evening hearings.

"Working girls find it extremely hard to come in the morning," she explained.

The commission would have an informal atmosphere and planned to hold hearings at such places as shopping centres as well as hotels.

Its hearings open April 15 in Victoria. It has also extended its deadline for submission of briefs to March 22 from Feb. 29.

Mrs. Bird said the commission has more briefs than any other commission had received in a similar period of time. It has received 30 briefs and has been advised of 150 more being prepared.

U.S. Group Back for Birthday

Seventy-five student musicians comprising the Symphony Band of the University of Puget Sound, Washington, will play in Metropolitan United Church tonight at 8:15.

Last February the band took part in the church's 108th anniversary celebrations and proved so popular it was invited to return for the 109th birthday this weekend.

Tonight's concert of popular classical music is free to ticket holders, but a collection will be taken to raise funds for the completion of the Spencer Memorial Chapel, adjoining Metropolitan Church.

Under its conductor, Robert C. Taylor, the symphony band will also play at the Sunday morning service when Rev. Dr. Robert Cunningham of St. Andrew's Wesley, Vancouver, will be the guest speaker.

The Sanctuary Choir, directed by Frank Tupman, with Eric Boothroyd at the organ, will sing Now Let the Full-Tone Chorus Sound, Lift the Strain of High Thanksgiving and O Trinity Most Blessed Light.

Japanese Snap Up Bibles; 5 Million Sold Last Year

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Church Editor

More books were published last year in Japan than any other country — and 5,000,000 of them are Bibles.

"Japan is now the most literate country in the world," says Rev. Raymond Tingley, secretary of the Canadian Bible Society in British Columbia.

"Almost 99 per cent of the Japanese people can read and write. They are highly creative, both in art and literature, and by 1975 they could become the biggest industrial nation in the world."

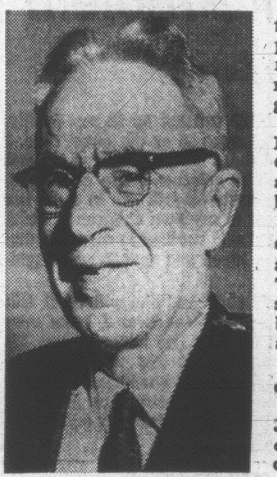
Mr. Tingley said, although there are fewer than 800,000 Christians in Japan, the circulation of Bibles and scriptures in 1967 exceeded 5,000,000.

"This is the strange challenge we have to face—that the most literate people in the world have still to be converted to Christianity. And with faith, courage and understanding I believe we can do it."

During a recent visit to Japan, Mr. Tingley said he was unimpressed, not only by the great industry of the people, but by the high standards expected of school students.

"This is a highly-competitive country in which the best is expected of everyone. It may not conform with our Christian standards of kindness to competitors, but it is a force we shall have to reckon with in the years ahead."

Mr. Tingley said, while Japan has been largely subsidized by the United States, its drive towards education and greater productive power is something which has "grown within them."



"MISTER" TINGLEY
. . . not Doctor please!

As a loyal servant of the World's Best Seller, Mr. Tingley if often called "Doctor Tingley." He rejects the title.

"Every clergyman is called doctor nowadays—as if he were doctoring the Scriptures instead of reading them."

WORDS CHANGE

On this point, however, Mr. Tingley agrees that the Scriptures need interpreting because so many words have changed their meaning since the King James' version was written.

Take the word "trip" for instance. It used to mean a trip to a nice place Up-Island; now it is associated with psychedelic drugs.

"Words have been changing their meanings for centuries past," Mr. Tingley said, "and many words in the Old Bible are meaningless to the present generation.

"For that reason I think the New Curriculum of the United Church of Canada is a sincere attempt to make the Bible better understood."

More than 9,000,000 copies of Good News for Modern Man — an interpretation of the New Testament in modern (but not slangy) English—have been sold by the parent Bible Society across the world.

The first chapter, the Gospel of Matthew, begins:

"This is the birth record of Jesus Christ, who was a descendant of David, who was a descendant of Abraham."

NEVER TRIED BEFORE

Says Mr. Tingley:

"We are proud of this work because it has brought the Bible home to millions of people who would never have even tried to read it in the old version."

Mr. Tingley said the Bible Society sells many copies of the New Testament for 25 cents each, which means that the printing has to be subsidized from funds.

The Canadian Bible Society is one of 35 Bible societies operating throughout the world today. And between them they have distributed 100,000,000 copies of the Scriptures.

Mr. Tingley spoke to a crowded meeting in Central Baptist Church, Victoria, Monday night when he showed a film of missionary work in Tibet entitled Under the Red Pagoda.

He will visit five churches in the Duncan area Sunday.

That's All For Now

For years Mrs. H. A. Arnold of 30 Howe Street has collected Christmas cards to send to needy persons in foreign lands who appreciate them.

"The response has been so generous," Mrs. Arnold said, "that I cannot accept any more cards at this time. I've really run out of storage space."

'The New Covenant'

R. E. Avery will speak on The New Covenant at a meeting of the Victoria branch, British Israel World Federation, in the Dominion Hotel Sunday at 3 p.m.

Has All Vitality Drained Away?

Is the church still a vital force—or is it simply an old form of worship which society is loath to relinquish?

The question was raised by Rev. John Watson, minister of Victoria's Baptist Church, at the fifth of a series of discussions sponsored this week by Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

Mr. Watson said he believed any re-structuring of the modern church, any changes in its administration, ministry or approach to society must be based on the Word of God.

"Re-birth and renewal are impossible by any other standard. Institutional forms of church life are good, but never as an end in themselves. What the whole church needs is a new vision, a complete new concept of the universality of Christianity.

"The church in disbursion is the church in the office, factory, home and school, and present institutional forms are secondary to the purpose they serve."

Asked "what then is the use of the local church?" Mr. Watson replied:

"The local church is where the lamp is lit. But we dare not leave it there. Such evasion of our Christian mission means we ceased to be Christian."

WHY CHANGE

Rev. Patrick Ratchford of the Roman Catholic Church of Victoria asked:

"Why change the church at all? It is not so much the institutional form that matters. It's the commitment of the members that counts."

Father Ratchford said many prefer to work and witness for Christ through their local church, without radical changes.

"Which is better?" he asked. "To change the institutional form, or transform the community it serves? Commitment to the cause is what counts."

Professor to Discuss Mormon Manuscripts

Recovery of Egyptian papyrus manuscripts belonging to the Mormon Church will be related by Prof. Ross Butler of the University of Victoria in Victoria Mormon Church, 2990 Quadra Street, Sunday at 6:30 p.m.

The manuscripts, once owned by Mormon prophet Joseph Smith, were thought to have been destroyed in the Chicago fire of 1871.

But in 1966 they were found accidentally by Dr. Aziz Atiya in the huge vaults of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. Dr. Atiya persuaded the administrators of the museum to return the manuscripts to the church.

They say the papyrus rolls contained the writings of Abraham and Joseph of Old Testament times and that Joseph Smith translated them by divine power.

Prof. Butler came to Victoria recently to teach Spanish at the university. An elder in the Mormon church, he also teaches in a youth seminary program held in the church from 7 to 8 a.m. five days a week.

Church Union Forecast Before 1974

Union of the Anglican and United churches by 1974 was forecast by Rev. H. Gordon Walker, vicar of St. David-by-the-Sea, Cordova Bay, at the annual meeting this week.

Mr. Walker said Anglican church headquarters in Toronto had set 1974 as the year for union with the United church and 1969 as the year for intercommunion.

"We, at St. David's, have come a long way in these matters with the local United church," Mr. Walker said. "We are moving further towards inter-communion and co-operation."

Officers elected were A. C. Coomber, vicar's warden; R. G. Scott, people's warden; J. C. Lort, lay reader; treasurer, J. M. B. Nicoll; envelope secretary, A. F. Snowball; Mrs. M. H. A. Glover, vestry clerk.

Synod delegates are J. C. Lort, A. C. Coomber, Mrs. F. G. Tanner; alternate, Mrs. K. K. John.

Social Welfare Group Backs Indian Brief

The B.C. Association of Social Welfare policy committee today backed an Indian brief censuring the Indian affairs branch.

The brief, partly prepared by Mrs. Diana Recalma, wife of a Qualicum chief, criticizes the administration of reserves and the lack of social justice for Indians.

Ray T. Ferris, chairman, said the mass of social problems facing Indians were adequately described in the brief and the statement that the department has ignored these problems was "fair."

Mr. Ferris, also supervisor of the extended care section, Family and Children's Service, has made extensive studies of Indian social and welfare problems.

He has written to Mrs. Recalma commending the Indians for their brief.

RUN AROUND

The committee agreed, he said, that Indians are given the run around when they apply for services they are entitled to have.

"The experience with the insensitive, bureacratic system — the denial of rights, etc. — these are all confirmed by our own experience," he stated.

"We also agree that discrimination amongst Indian Affairs Branch employees is one of the critical issues," he added. "The problem has not been tackled with an enthusiasm by those who should be responsible for its eradication."

The committee supported the brief's recommendation that welfare matters should be taken over by the province.

(The Indian affairs branch is prepared to do this but so far the B.C. government has refused to consider the proposal.)

Mr. Ferris said the committee is presently studying ways and means of tackling the problem of Indian welfare.

'SHOCKING'

"Everyone has agreed that something should be done urgently," he said. Indian social and welfare problems are shocking."

But, he added, the chief problem will be to ensure that enough concern is generated to make action inevitable.

"We will have to conquer the apathy of many people who are helping agencies," he added. "We will have to start by changing attitudes, attacking dogmas and instilling constructive thinking. We must find ways of making people accept responsibility."

Mrs. Recalma agreed with Mr. Ferris that Indians shared a responsibility for bringing about a change.

"Mr. Ferris knows what he's talking about," she said.

CANADA COUNCIL OFFICIALS SAY:

B.C. Artists Among Most Exciting

British Columbia artists are among the most exciting in Canada, according to Canada Council arts officer David Silcox.

Mr. Silcox and Rodrigue Millette, another arts officer, are acting as cross-country guides for judge Jack Bush, Marcel Barbeau and Doris Shadbolt who will award Canada Council bursaries to 110 promising young artists.

They were in Victoria Friday to view the Art Gallery and speak to local artists.

"There is a whole generation of brilliant young talent in B.C. who have been recognized by visitors from outside the province and outside the country," Mr. Silcox said.

"Part of the reason for the growth of a good artistic scene here is the growth of the Vancouver and Victoria Art Galleries. They have both worked to create an atmosphere in which young artists were able to create significant works.

"I hope public support of the galleries increases particularly in Victoria," Mr. Silcox added.

The group began their tour in the middle of January. They will have to decide among 320 applicants for the $3,500 awards which will be announced in April.

When the tour ends in Vancouver, they will have looked at over 3,000 paintings and sculptures.

'FANTASTIC'

"It's been a fantastic experience," Mr. Bush said. "We've found a very good quality of work in centres all across Canada.

"We're not looking for any particular kind of work just qualify in all directions.

"We don.t restrict ourselves to any kind of art—we're searching for traditional artists as well as modern.

"It's not a comparison in style, but in standards," Mr. Millette added.

Increase in Alcoholism Termed Alarming by Expert

The number of chronic alcoholics in B.C. is increasing alarmingly, a conference was told Friday night.

E. D. McRae, executive director of the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C., said alcoholics increased from 17,500 in 1954 to 27,500 in 1964, and has shown no sign of abating since.

This represents an increase of 700 for every 100,000 adults.

There are about 4,500 alcoholics in the Greater Victoria area.

The two-day conference, sponsored by the Greater Victoria Institute on Alcoholism, is designed to "promote a better understanding of current problems caused by alcoholism in Greater Victoria so that more effective action can be taken to resolve them."

Mr. McRae said alcoholism is clearly a disease "which is not under control in our province."

"Man should not stand idly by save to admonish those afflicted," he said.

He said alcoholism is a public health problem.

There are three criteria for determining a public health problem he said.

It must be a disease, it must affect large numbers and it must threaten the health and well being of others.

Alcoholism qualifies, he said.

Dr. Norman Mellor, clinic physician for the Victoria branch of AFBC, spoke on the physical and mental damage caused by alcoholism.

He said alcoholism in B.C. is being handled "poorly and inadequately" with attitudes of disgust prevalent.

Alcoholics often suffer "remorse and guilt after a binge," and such attitudes on the part of society only drive them to further anti-social behavior.

Dr. Mellor said a school program on alcohol is needed starting with six and seven-year-olds. He said young people must decide for themselves on the use of alcohol after a comprehensive presentation of the facts.

He also proposed an "updating of antiquated liquor laws."

He said B.C. ranks eighth in all the provinces in per capita expenditure in the treatment of alcoholism — only 12 cents per capita.

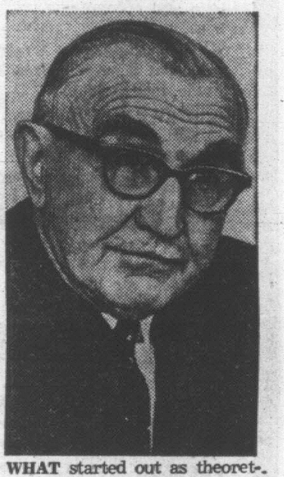
The doctor said there are only two beds for alcoholics in the Bay Pavilion at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

There should be six to eight and another 15 for rehabilitation, he said.

'PROSPECTS EVERYWHERE'

LONDON (CP)—Trade Minister Winters said Friday he is "enthusiastic" about export opportunities for Canada in five countries he has just visited.

Winters, who retires at the end of this month after two years as minister, is on the way home after a swing through Britain, Holland, Italy, Iran and India. He said in an interview he found selling prospects everywhere he went.



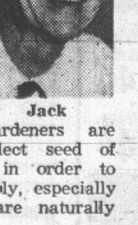
WHAT started out as theoretical dissent on the Vietnam war has become widespread disapproval during three years of full-scale fighting, Sen. Wayne Morse, D—Ore., told a Columbus, Ohio, university audience Friday night. One of the chief war critics, he said the prolonged fighting has moved the discussion from the realm of the academic to the living room of every American home.

TIPS FOR HOME GARDENERS

You Start With Two Species, Then Things Start Happening

By JACK BEASTALL

This business of saving one's own seed is quite confusing, and the confusion is caused because we gardeners have never studied the law of genetics. We know that some of our plants scatter their seeds and the seedlings are all alike and match the parent plant.



Jack

We also know that gardeners are advised to collect seed of certain plants in order to maintain a supply, especially if the plants are naturally short-lived.

On the other hand, we are often told that it is useless to save seed of other plants because the seedlings will not come true.

In other words, the seedlings will prove to be a motley array of plants, none of which will resemble the parent in the characters we desire.

At this point we come to a couple of words frequently seen in horticultural and agricultural literature: species and hybrids.

Taking a lot of liberties in order to simplify matters, we can say in a general way that species are wild plants and hybrids are plants resulting from intentional cross-breeding of species.

But as soon as you simplify a technical subject and convert it to the layman's language, you are no longer strictly correct in your statements, so we must ask the learned gardener to bear with us until we reach a basic understanding.

When a true species produces seed the seedlings are all like the parent plant, and that is the way the species is perpetuated.

A hybrid is the result of the controlled cross-breeding of two species which have different characters, the aim being to combine the desirable characters and eliminate, if possible, those which are undesirable.

As soon as we cross two species within a genus a lot of things will happen, and some of these happenings can be forecast because they will follow the law of heredity, or Mendel's Law.

Briefly it works this way. We start with two species, one of which has white flowers and the other red flowers.

We cross-pollinate these two and sow the seed that is produced, and we find that all the seedlings are alike, possibly bearing a pink flower.

These seedlings are "first generation hybrids" or, as you often see in your seed catalogues, F1 hybrids.

We now have F1 hybrid vegetables and F1 hybrid flowers, and all the F1 hybrids of any controlled cross will be exactly alike.

To obtain the F1 petunias of sweet corn next year we have to make another cross with the same parents. As long as we continue controlled crossing of the same two parent plants we shall get the same F1 hybrid seed.

Supposing we take one of these F1 hybrid plants and cross it with either the white-flowered or the red-flowered parent, we should then have a motley array of second-generation hybrids, or F2 hybrids.

All the characters of the original parents will have separated and re-combined in dozens of different ways. There will be variations in height, in leaf shape, in flower color and sometimes in flower shape.

Going back to our F1 hybrid petunias of which we purchased seed. This seed produced, say, all pink petunia flowers on plants of similar habit and height.

While these flowers are open in our garden they are cross-pollinated by wind or insects with pollen from any other petunia that happened to be growing in the vicinity.

This open pollination, as it is called, causes the same separation and re-combining of parental characters, plus the characters of the nearby plant from which the pollen was taken.

The result is an explosion of characters, and the resulting seedlings will, in most instances, prove useless as desirable garden plants.

The same thing happens to corn, squash, melons, cucumbers, cabbage, and all vegetables which have been improved by a plant-breeding program.

Many gardeners have proved this to be true when they have saved seed of a hybrid cucumber or squash and discovered the fruits to be bitter and unsuitable for eating.

WEEK'S WORK

Sow seeds indoors in a cool place (45 to 50 deg. F.) or in boxes in a coldframe of perennials such as delphiniums, lupins, aquilegias, carnations, Pansies and violas.

If a good light place is available indoors until May, cut fuschsias back at least half way now and repot into good soil. Water very sparingly until growth begins.

By mid month make sowing indoors or in cool greenhouse, of summer and fall cabbage including red cabbage. Also early summer cauliflower, and early Brussels sprouts.

In a heated greenhouse or a sunroom, sow snaps, lobelia, ageratum and petunia. These will be budded by May planting out time, and give flowers for June shows.

Give an early start to sweet peas and green peas. Sow two in a two-inch peat pot or plant band. Keep cool after germination, so that plants are strong for planting out by early April, if weather suitable.

Whenever temperatures are again up to winter normals, remove protective branches from plants so that soft growth is not encouraged.

Hoe the surface of composted beds to let in the air for drying and warming if the area is wanted for early planting or sowing.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Sophisticated defense doesn't always succeed against a sophisticated declarer. Jais and Trezel played on the French team that won the 1960 Olympiad, but there was one hand in their match against one American team when their sophistication failed to pay off.

When North put down the dummy, he remarked, "I hope we haven't missed a grand slam." The nameless American expert who was declarer replied, "I know all about those grand slam bonuses." North and the referee laughed. Trezel, sitting West, joined in the laughter while Jais, sitting East, remained silent and looked very grave.

South went into a huddle after playing the ace of hearts and called for dummy's king of diamonds. When Trezel showed out, Jais turned to South and asked, "How did you know?"

South replied, "I always play queen over the jack," and proceeded to make his slam. At the other table, France also reached six no-trump. The French South gave the hand the classic play of trying the club finesse at trick two. Then, after winning the second heart, he played out all his spades and clubs in an effort to obtain a count. Finally, he went wrong in diamonds and was down three.

After the match, which France won rather handily, in spite of this hand, when he was accepting congratulations Jais asked once more, "How did you know?"

The American tried to shrug it off, but Jais knew that he must have had some very good reason to play diamonds before he had to do so. The reason was that Jais was obviously trying to look like a man with the queen of diamonds, while Trezel was trying to look like a man who didn't have it, and the American just decided to believe both of them.

SHOW PROFIT OR LOSS?

Joe Doakes bought a colt for $90, intending to train it for riding purposes. A short time later, he had an opportunity to sell it for $100 and did so. The buyer found he didn't have a satisfactory barn in which to keep it, and Doakes offered to buy it back at $80. The offer was accepted. How much did Doakes make on the three-way transaction?

Solution: Nothing. Doakes has a horse that cost $70 ($90 the original purchase price, less the $20 difference between the price which he sold and price at which he bought it back). He cannot figure any profit or loss until he sells the horse again.

West Coasters Protesting Power Cuts

Ucluelet-Port Albion Chamber of Commerce, backed by local business firms and private citizens, have wired Premier Bennett, Highways Minister Gaglardi, Hydro co-chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum and Alberni MLA Dr. H. R. McDiarmid.

Students To Air Complaints

PORT ALBERNI — School principal R. W. Lawson has called a special meeting of parents Monday in the aftermath of a short-lived student rebellion against school rules Thursday.

The action followed a 20-minute sit-down demonstration by about 250 of the A. W. Neill Junior High school's 700 students during the lunch hour Thursday.

The students refused to return to their classrooms after the bell rang. Instead, they sat on the lawn to protest rules against smoking on school grounds and leaving the grounds during the lunch hour.

Teachers were unable to persuade them to return to classes and district superintendent William Gurney was called to the school.

The superintendent asked the students to return to classes and told them they would have a chance to air their complaints.

"I arrived at about 1:10 . . . and the students returned at about 1:20," Mr. Gurney said today.

He explained the major complaints made by the students were that they couldn't smoke on school property and that they had to have school or parental permission to leave the grounds during the lunch period.

Students said the protests were made because boys caught smoking on school grounds had been suspended.

They also objected that they were not allowed to use funds raised for their student's council.

Mr. Gurney stressed that the action centred on student objections to the two rules. He plans to meet the school board Monday to discuss the matter.

Parents have been requested by Principal Lawson to tell school authorities by Monday morning if they plan to attend the meeting.

In his notice to the parents, Mr. Lawson said the protest launched by the students could not be resolved without parents' participation.

Japanese Claim Criticized

VANCOUVER (CP)—Lawyers seeking $1,500,000 federal compensation for a Japanese couple whose land was confiscated during the Second World War had their case criticized Thursday in the Exchequer Court of Canada.

Mr. Justice F. A. Shepherd told James Barratt, one of the lawyers representing Mr. and Mrs. Torazo Iwasaki, the case was "mixed up like a dog's breakfast."

He adjourned a motion for statement of claim for a week.

The statement says the Iwasakis' 640 acres on Salt Spring Island were confiscated in 1945 when they were moved to the interior of British Columbia with thousands of other Japanese as a security measure.

It alleges the secretary of state, acting as custodian of the property, "fraudulently conveyed or caused to be conveyed" the property to Salt Spring Lands Ltd.

Later the Iwasakis received $13,015.9 in two payments for the land which included 2½ miles of shoreline.

Ambulance Hall To Cost $28,000

NORTH COWICHAN — A new ambulance hall for the Duncan and municipal south end district will cost about $28,000.

This was the estimate given by Duncan Kiwanis Ambulance Society to North Cowichan council.

A society request for a municipal contribution toward the capital cost was referred to the finance committee.

Duncan council is also being asked to contribute capital.

N. Viet Bombers Add New Threat

Cong Hoping Next Attack Spurs Revolt

WASHINGTON (AP)—Top U.S. officials expect Communist forces to launch a second wave of attacks against the cities and towns of South Vietnam. But they say Communist losses in the first offensive have been so heavy the new onslaught should be weaker.

On the basis of information from prisoners and documents captured in the fighting, officials say they are convinced the Viet Cong intended to hold many population centres and to set off a popular uprising.

Presumably they would have the same objective in the expected new drive.

TROOPS ALERT

Authorities believe U.S. and South Vietnamese forces are in a better state of readiness for the expected second wave than they were for the first.

This is attributed partly to the high state of alert on which these forces are being kept and partly to the heavy Communist casualties, which U.S. authorities put at 25,000 killed and 5,000 captured.

On the positive side of the intensive fighting, officials say no South Vietnamese military units defected.

There were no popular uprisings in support of the Communists, no population centres were held by the Communists, and the Communists suffered high losses, these officials said.

On the negative side are cited the problems of refugee care and rebuilding and the damage to the pacification program—designed to secure hundreds of South Vietnamese population centres and win the people's loyalty to the Saigon government by giving them security.

Still Peace Hope, Russia Tells U.S.

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, says the U.S. still has an opportunity of breaking the deadlock over peace negotiations with North Vietnam.

"The issue is whether Washington will take advantage of this opportunity or will continue along the dangerous road of aggression and piracy," the newspaper says.

A commentary by Pravda's Hanoi correspondent, Oleg Ignatyev, deals with a recent statement by North Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh reiterating an offer to start peace talks if the U.S. unconditionally stops the bombings and all other acts of war against North Vietnam.

The commentary, and a statement issued Friday night by the official Tass news agency taking much the same attitude, are printed in Pravda along with news that Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev has pledged continuing Soviet aid and support for the Viet Cong in South Vietnam.

Political observers said the combined Soviet support for stepped-up Viet Cong action in South Vietnam and for Hanoi's latest peace offer is evidence that the Viet Cong offensive launched in Vietnam last week was intended as a lever to bring the United States to the negotiating table on Hanoi's terms.

Referring to the North Vietnamese peace talk offers, the Tass statement said:

"If the United States truly wants talks, then what prevents it from taking advantage of the proposals of the North Vietnamese government and the South Vietnam National Liberation Front? Nothing prevents it from doing so at all."

Khe Sanh Tension Rising

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. command today disclosed the presence of three Russian-made jet bombers on North Vietnamese flight lines within 30 minutes flying time of Khe Sanh.

The report further escalated the potential scope of the developing battle for the American fortress.

In Saigon, South Vietnamese and American troops battled a force of about 1,000 Viet Cong attacking the city from the northwest and reported killing 278 in heavy fighting.

FIRST TIME

The North Vietnamese used tanks for the first time in the war last week near Khe Sanh, and the Communist potential increased with the three Russian IL28 bombers at Phuc Yen air base 17 miles north of Hanoi. It is the nerve center of the North Vietnamese air force.

The report said U.S. airmen dropped bombs that landed "on or in close proximity" to one of three Russian planes.

BASED ELSEWHERE

Three other IL28s are believed based elsewhere in North Vietnam.

The presence of the bombers and the ferocity of the Communists' lunar New Year offensive were believed major factors in the decision to resume heavy air raids into North Vietnam's Hanoi-Haiphong power core.

U.S. bombers hit the Kep and Cat BI air bases defending Hanoi and Haiphong today in the first strikes of any intensity deep into North Vietnam in more than a month.

Hopes Rise in Pueblo Crisis As Special U.S. Envoy Due

SEOUL (AP) — Hopes for release of the Pueblo crew members rose again today with reports on the fifth U.S.-North Korean secret meeting and the impending arrival from Washington of U.S. trouble-shooter Cyrus Vance.

The crew members have been held prisoner in North Korea for 17 days.

A source close to the South Korean government reported Seoul officials believe the North Koreans may hand over the one dead crew member and three injured men in the not too distant future, but that the other 79 U.S. prisoners will have a longer wait.

Vance was scheduled to arrive in Seoul Sunday morning. He recently won attention with his successful mediation efforts to head off war between Greece and Turkey over Cyprus.

Smoothing things over with South Korean leaders is seen as a major though unannounced purpose of Vance's visit. The South Koreans have been piqued by what they regard as the U.S. stress on the Pueblo incident and relative inattention to the North Korean guerrilla attempt on the life of President Chung Hee Park.

The White House said Friday that Vance was going to Seoul to see Park about "the measures to be taken by our two governments to deal with a North Korea suddenly grown more pugnacious."

In a development from Washington, U.S. officials disclosed that eight MiG jet fighters were overhead during the seizure of the U.S. electronic intelligence gathering ship Jan. 23. The officials also said that by piecing together various scraps of intelligence they have determined that numerous shots were fired across the Pueblo's bow before she was halted.

Contradicting earlier U.S. statements that the Pueblo had observed radio silence from Jan. 10 to Jan. 21, the officials said the ship transmitted a routine radio message Jan. 20 — three days before her capture — indicating she was outside North Korea's 12-mile limit.

North Korea has demanded an admission by the U.S. that the Pueblo violated North Korean territorial waters, an apology and a promise that it won't happen again. The North Koreans say this is a prerequisite for the crew's release.

All 24 Plucked From Sea As Canadian Ship Lists

NEW YORK (AP)—Twenty-four persons were plucked from two life boats and a life raft in the stormy Atlantic today and brought aboard a rescue vessel after they abandoned their listing Canadian freighter 550 miles off Cape Hatteras, N.C., the U.S. Coast Guard said.

About 10 hours after the skipper of the 313-foot Charny, out of Quebec, radioed he was abandoning ship, its crew of 22 and two passengers—a man and his wife—were reported aboard the Norwegian freighter Vinni, "all in good condition."

The Vinni was the closest vessel to the Charny when the distress call went out.

The Charny, built in 1958 and owned by North Shipping and Transportation Ltd., was reported listing badly in eight-foot seas but still afloat.

The coast guard cutter Absecon was en route to the scene.

The Charny's captain, Jules Jordain of Cap Chat, Que., first reported his craft had four feet of water in one hold and could remain afloat for no more than four hours. Then, just 10 minutes later, came the radio message: "I think we may turn over. When we abandon ship we'll try and stay close to the vessel."

Meanwhile, about 200 miles from the Charny rescue, the stricken Liberian freighter Pegasos, trailing a heavy oil slick, rendezvoused Friday with a tug.

The 629-foot ship, with six of her crew still aboard, was leaking her cargo of 30,000 tons of oil through one and possibly two cracks in her hull.

REPUBLICANS BICKER AS TRASH PILE MOUNTS

NEW YORK (AP) — Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller today pressed his effort to end the now politically entangled sanitation strike without a national guard call-up as the massive garbage pileup grew and health and fire hazards mounted.

Holding out against Mayor John V. Lindsay's repeated pleas for a guard call-up, the governor accused the mayor of a breach of position in the strike and began new talks to seek a permanent solution to the crisis.

As the deepening division between the two Republicans became apparent, there was new urgency for a settlement in the disruption of private trash collections throughout the city. This added 5,000 tons to the daily accumulation.

Meanwhile, New York's Central Labor Council, which commands all metropolitan AFL-CIO unions, voted unanimously today to cripple the city with a general strike if the National Guard is called out.

TRUDEAU TO DECIDE IN 10 DAYS

Ontario Cheers Mr. Yes-No

TORONTO (CP) — Declared Liberal leadership candidates sought support Friday at the party's Onatrio convention in the shadow of non-candidate Pierre Trudeau, a smash hit in a two-hour appearance.

About 500 convention-goers gave the elegant federal justice minister a mob-scene welcome in a room hired by his supporters at the convention hotel.

One Trudeau promoter said he was flabbergasted at the welcome. Casual in a sports jacket, Mr. Trudeau stayed calm in the crowd crush, autographing convention programs, handshaking and accepting the greetings of well-wishers.

The atmosphere prompted one man to shake Mr. Trudeau's hand and say: "God bless you."

Mr. Trudeau, during a session-opening news conference, said he had yet to make up his mind on whether to become the French-Canadian candidate in the race.

He expected to say one way or the other within 10 days after more private talks with supporters across the country.

Careful not to upset convention routine, Mr. Trudeau left before the evening's speech-making marathon by nine declared candidates began. As a non-candidate, Mr. Trudeau was not permitted to speak.

Mr. Trudeau's political foray into English Canada was the work of the newly-formed Ontario for Trudeau committee, which hoped the reception might put the slim and smiling minister into the race.

The speech-making saw declared candidates stick to generalities in their attempts to impress the audience of 2,400 packed into a hotel ballroom.

GM Strike Under Way

TORONTO (CP) — More than 25,000 hourly-rated workers at seven General Motors plants in six Canadian cities officially went on strike at midnight.

Bargaining between the company and the United Auto Workers union broke off at 11:15 p.m., 45 minutes before the union's strike deadline. There are no signs of further negotiations.

Whut some want is th' Trudeau, th' whole Trudeau an' nothin' but th' Trudeau.

Victoria Daily Times
VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1968 —PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

Once in the low-population years when Gordon Head paid only casual attention to Saanich's ukase against the discharge of firearms, I tucked a .22 rifle under my arm and strolled down through our wildlands. In the middle of the trail, bold as sin and twice as ugly, sat the largest rat I ever saw in my life.

It traded me stare for stare and made chittering noises with its teeth while I fumbled a cartridge into the single-shot and took nervous aim. My luck was in, the marauder expired, and I went up for a spade and buried it deep.

Except for a rat that our tough black cat Cleo slew in mortal combat, we haven't seen another on our place. Her catship may be the reason why.

I'm told we're not too badly off in the matter of rats, but Vancouver, like most large seaports, is a ratty town. Wherever ships put in, Norvegicus Rattus steals ashore to find a mate and reproduce like crazy.

Metal guards on ships' lines are supposed to keep this unwanted immigrant from entering our province, and perhaps they do discourage the timid or the clumsy. But one dusk a couple of us watched a moving bulge on a mooring line approach one of these discs. There the shadows hid it; but just as we were about to turn away, we heard a distinct, small plop, and saw a V of ripples moving toward the dock pilings.

Whether he fell or jumped, I don't know, but that varmint was a capable swimmer.

Rattus, unpleasant customer that he is, remains almost exclusively a problem of our coastal plain.

The provincial pest control office scarce numbers him among its customers, which include bugs, pocket gophers, ground squirrels, the universal mouse, and other enemies of farmer and orchardist.

Rattus doesn't like mountains, and thanks to the Coast Range on the west and the Rockies and their subsidiary ranges to the eastward, the British Columbia interior is relatively free of his kind.

Alberta, with no ramparts to turn back the hordes that munch and scurry across woodland and plain from the East, is less fortunate.

Were it not for a vigorous control problem, our neighbor would be over-run by such an invasion as might make the Pied Piper himself flee for the hills.

The rat-battlers of Alberta's department of agriculture follow a policy of hitting the marauders hard and keeping after them, and the terms they employ will be all too familiar to anyone who follows the military pronouncements from Vietnam.

Using an anti-coagulant called warfarin as their weapon, they strive for a total kill that will leave no family survivors to repopulate and spread the work.

Rattus is fiendishly clever. Let him escape, and the alarm goes out: 'Lay off those plastic bags of rolled oats and icing sugar, boys! They're poison!"

The Alberta kill for a single year has run as high as a spine-prickling 80,000.

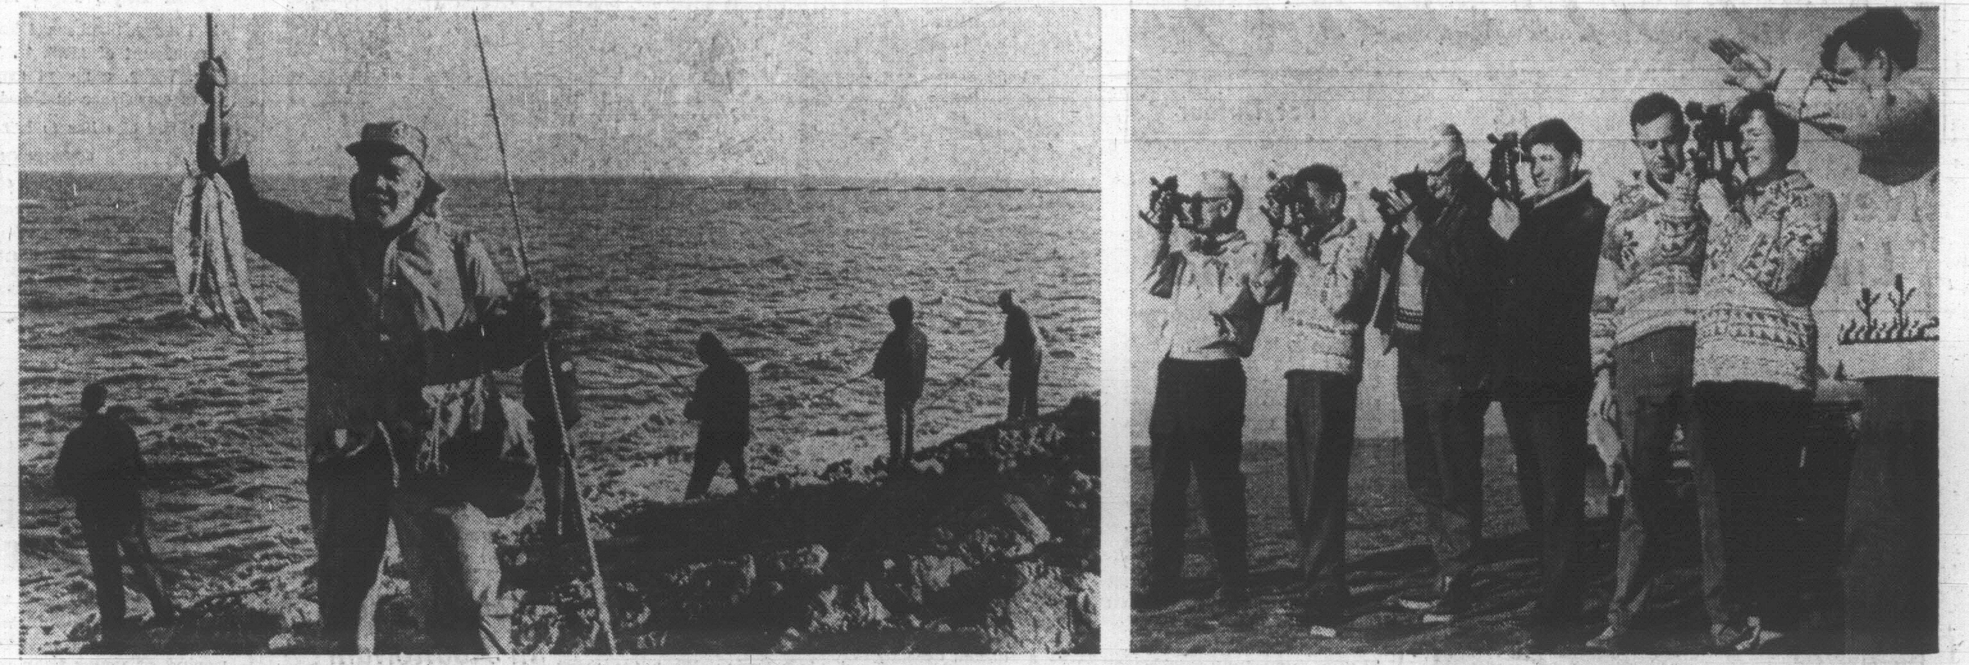
Last year, it sank to a mere 34,000, a cheering circumstance that prompted the head ratter to predict a time when North America will be free of the food-damaging and disease-spreading pests.

Possibly when mushrooming populations have gobbled all the food available for man and rat, that optimistic forecast will come true. But even then, I'm betting on Rattus. I dislike him intensely, but if any species survives, it will be his shrewd and hardly tribe!

Our own rat population (four-legged, that is) gets its wafarin from Metropolitan Board of Health, which reports very effective control in the municipalities it serves direct.

If you live in the outer areas including Saanich, and have rats, the Board will supply bait and advice on request.

Then begins a battle of wits — man against his ancient enemy—in which victory goes to the smartest.



SPLENDID SUN AND BOUNTIFUL SEA will bring Victorians into the fresh air in droves this weekend. Maybe its flirting with disaster to say it but the sweet smell of spring is here. Ken Hampson of 1606 Blair St. has that good-to-be-alive grin as he holds aloft mess of grilse, caught casting from shore off Ten Mile Point. Rocks will be lined with anglers after the pan-sized salmon. And at Clover Point instructor Rod Darby (right) has brought his night school deep sea navigation class outside for an essential lesson. "Shooting the sun" in their first try at handling sextant are (left to right) Arthur Snowball, George Dufour, Harold Ogden, Jeff Savage, Ralph Higgins and Anne Weir. No need to plot their "fix". Where else in Canada does spring arrive in February and give everybody that get-up-and-go feeling? (Bill Halkett Photos)

'CAN'T AFFORD IT'

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Labor Reporter

The provincial government's revamped house-acquisition program will make it "less possible" for young people to buy homes, a union official said today.

He was commenting on the discontinuance this summer of the $500 acquisition grant for purchase of older homes and doubling the grant for persons building new homes.

"I think a meaningful grant to reward these young people for buying older homes would be more effective," said John Schibli, president of the Victoria local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and secretary of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council.

As a result of the $1,000 offer on new houses only, young people will be "lured" into new houses "and find themselves loaded down with a $25,000 home."

"MORE VALID"

The original grant was more valid and could have been extended.

"The fellow who doesn't need the assistance is going to get it," he said.

From Vancouver, prominent realtor Henry Block of Block Brothers said the $1,000 grant "won't be of much help to the person who is earning $7,000 and less, the people who need to be helped."

However, Jim McLaren, president of the Victoria Home Builders Association, said the $1,000 "will be a definite asset to those who are trying to build a house. Obviously it will make down payments less."

The old scheme paid $500 outright to B.C. residents buying a house for the first time.

New legislation introduced Friday will make the same $500 payment to persons whose homes now are under construction or who enter into agreements to buy existing homes before March 31. Persons who agree to buy homes between April 1 and July 1 will get $525.

The $1,000 will be paid outright to first-time buyers who start building on and after today. People who have collected less than $1,000 in homeowner grants will be able to qualify for the difference between the homeowner grant total and the new $1,000 grant.

The $525 acquisition grant for existing homes will end July 1.

EMERGENCY TRACHEOTOMY SAVES CHILD

A 14-month-old child is in good condition today after Saanich ambulance took him to hospital for an emergency tracheotomy.

Mrs. Maurice Gauthier, 4057 Gordon Head Road, ran to a neighbor's home Friday when she discovered her child Lance was having difficulty breathing.

A Saanich police car and ambulance were dispatched and the boy was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital. Oxygen was administered on the way.

POPPING UP from pot-hole long enough to distribute buttons to provincial cabinet ministers Friday was Port McNeill's Gerry Furney. Campaigning for better roads, Mr. Furney was here to hand out some of the 1,000 buttons printed to read "Non Potholorum Carborundum"—or, don't let the pot-holes get you down.

By PAUL MUSGROVE

The galloping ghosts of "Gaglardi's Gap" have been and gone, leaving in their wake buttons, briefs and limericks.

Spearheading the raid was Gerry Furney, spokesman for the Associated Chambers of Commerce of North Vancouver Island.

Their brief has been presented to Premier Bennett along with a hefty supply of limericks, the northerners' greatest weapon.

The Gap is serviced by private ferry once or twice a day and the cost is $17.50 one way for a car with driver. The trip is a four-hour run, comparable in miles to the run between Nanaimo and Horseshoe Bay.

"Most people don't realize that when you arrive in Kelsey Bay you are only two-thirds of the way up the Island," Mr. Furney said.

There are more than 10,000 persons on the northern tip of the Island and smaller outlying islands.

"These are the real pioneers," Mr. Furney stated.

A highway built to the Trans-Canada standard right to Port Hardy would cost $12,000,000. It has been promised by various governments for 50 years.

Mr. Furney said it was this golden promise that first got settlers into the area shortly after the turn of the century. By 1927 more than 1,000 lived in the San Josef-Cape Scott area. A government bridge was built and the settlers started work on a corduroy road.

Closing "Gaglardi's Gap" would enable the Queen of Prince Rupert to leave from Port Hardy, avoiding 60 miles of the most "hazardous going," and saving about $1,000,000 dollars annually in operating costs, Mr. Furney said.

The north Islanders, however, admit their poor roads have led to one asset which they have proclaimed in yet another limerick:

"Port McNeill girls are
prettier than most,
Of their beauty we really
must boast.
Their magnificent rumps
Are caused by the bumps
Island Coast."

$4 Million in Projects Await Thaw by Gov't

School Board Stymied

By DON VIPOND
Education Reporter

School construction in Greater Victoria "hung up" by the provincial government has passed the $4 million mark.

School board chairman Peter Bunn said today there are now 16 projects only requiring department of education approval before tenders are called.

With the plans for an addition to Victoria West elementary school delivered to the department Friday the estimated value of pending school building reached $4,150,600.

The department has had one set of plans since last Aug. 23.

"We're completely stymied by the failure of the provincial government to give us permission to go to tender," said Mr. Bunn.

MAJOR WORRIES

Trustees face two major worries:

"First, we are not going to have enough school facilities for the children next September.

"And second, if the freeze is continued for a sustained period, we won't be able to get these buildings for the estimated cost. With cost increases we will be priced out of the market."

Last May ratepayers in Greater Victoria approved a three-year school building program of $13 million.

So far, said Mr. Bunn, 20 per cent of the time has past but only 6 per cent of the building plans have been approved.

ESTIMATED COSTS

Referendum figures were based on estimated construction costs at a point half way through the threeyear program. Trustees fear that by the time plans are approved, actual costs will have soared past estimates.

The school board chairman said Premier Bennett's budget increases for education appear only able to care take of normal increase in education costs.

"It would seem there is no increase in the basic grant formula to provide relief to the individual taxpayer."

HERE ARE 16 SCHOOLS AFFECTED BY 'FREEZE'

The 16 "frozen" Greater Victoria school building projects awaiting department of education approval to call tenders:

Bank Street elementary school: $237,000 addition for four classrooms, a library and the second half of an activities room.

Hampton elementary school: $96,800 for three classrooms, a kindergarten, library and staff room.

Hillcrest elementary school: $294,000 for four classrooms, two kindergartens, a special room, library, the second half of an activity room and an administration area.

Macaulay elementary school: $2,359,000 for six classrooms, a kindergarten, library and a special room.

McKenzie elementary school: $200,000 for three classrooms, two kindergartens, a library, dressing rooms

Monterey elementary school: $370,000 for five classrooms, one special room, a library, an activity room, adminstration room and to renovate the 1912 heating plant.

Richmond elementary school: $250,000 for eight more classrooms.

PETER BUNN
'. . . we're ready'

Quadra elementary school: 181,000 for six classrooms, a kindergarten, library, enlarged activity room, staff room and renovating heating system.

Sir James Douglas elementary school: $215,000 for three classrooms, two kindergartens, a special room, library and renovations to the administrative and wash-room facilities.

Rockheights elementary school: $224,000 for seven classrooms, a special room, library, change rooms and washrooms.

Reynolds junior secondary: $560,000 for 10 more classrooms, three laboratories, six special rooms for such subjects as drafting and shop, extensions to work shop and library.

Victoria West elementary school: $674,000 for 14 more classrooms, an administrative centre, a library, an activity room, dressing rooms, washrooms and heating operation.

FORMER MUSEUM WORKER PLEADS GUILTY

'I Didn't Have the Nerve' To Replace Indian Relics

Robert Nichols, 58, of 730 Humboldt, will be held in jail until he returns for sentence Feb. 19.

He admitted Friday taking a copper Indian ceremonial mask worth $1,000 and a buckskin bag containing 56 Indian gambling sticks valued at $250, both the property of the Anglican Synod of B.C.

In a second count Nichols pleaded guilty to taking $1,315 in Indian artifacts, including knives and more gambling sticks, the property of the provincial museum.

The accused was employed as a field agent, charged with collecting Indian relics, between Sept. 1, 1965, and March 1 of last year, court was told.

SOLD MASK

Detective Walter Calwell said Nichols sold the mask and a quantity of his own artifacts to the Riveredge Foundation in Calgary for $4,500.

"I didn't need the money and had no intention of stealing," said the accused.

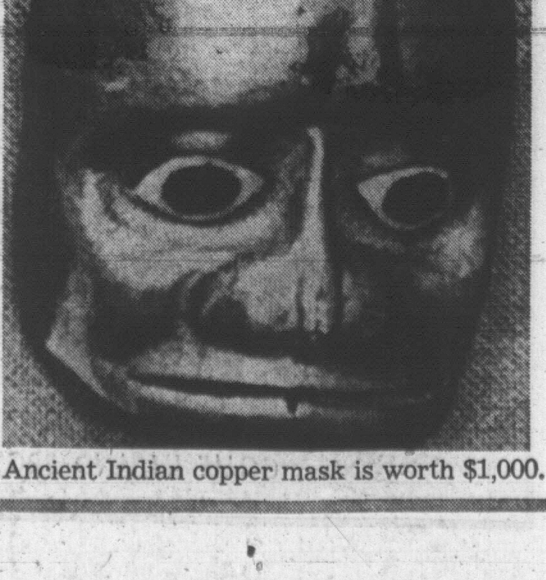
He said he took some of the items home to clean, repair and conduct research on the and when his eoployment terminated, "I didn't have the nerve to take it back."

He was not familiar with relics of the Northwest coastal tribes and had no idea of the value of the mask, he said.

He wanted the gambling sticks to study the individual designs on them.

The ancient mask and one set of the gambling sticks had been turned over to the museum by the Anglican church for cataloguing when they were taken.

All the missing articles have been recovered.



Ancient Indian copper mask is worth $1,000.

TV THIS WEEK

New Show Called 'Save Canada'

By AL FORREST
Staff Writer

They called a national conference in our living room this week to see if Canada was coming unglued.

It wasn't. But national unity got a real pasting anyway and TV cameras were there to record it all.

Before the show began, someone laid it on the line for the recalcitrant members:

There is absolutely no rational justification for bilingualism but, for Canada's sake, please realize it's desperately urgent that we toss out a few crumbs to assist moderate Quebec leaders in their battle against separatists.

Then the cameras rolled.

And many forgot their cues. Some just couldn't forget the home folks were listening. Others felt the urge to entertain.

MANNING
. . . fired the questions

The two of them could have done the whole chore in five minutes.

The rest—except for suave Daniel Johnson and comical Joey Smallwood—were big, fat ciphers in terms of meaningful debate.

It was, in the end, a success, probably.

But it would be well to heed the warning of Premier Manning and not let the agreement turn into a Munich pact of appeasement.

Otherwise, school children 50 years from now may be forced to say:

"They blundered bigger than they knew."

The Trudeau-Johnson slugfest was not difficult to predict. The justice minister could not hope to become PM unless he could prove he could stand up to Quebec.

Besides, as Mr. Johnson later explained: "If we didn't quarrel a bit everyone would think (the conference) was rigged."

You could call his performance colorful only if you are particularly fond of green.

On Monday CTV ran a 90-minute special which concluded that Mr. Trudeau is Canada's man of the hour.

Unless he seizes the initiative he could be edged out by someone a little more sharp.

TONIGHT — The crunch tonight comes at 9 p.m. when The Smothers Brothers (Ch. 6) face the movies . . . Mel Torme sings the praises of Bonnie and Clyde for the S. Brothers . . . at the same time channel 5 offers the intellectual thriller Freud . . . or you might like to lend an ear to Lust For Life (Ch. 12), featuring Kirk Douglas as Vincent Van Gogh.

Dick — "What could the U.S. do with London Bridge if it bought it?"

Now on Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In, Dan Rowan wears a disarmament button on his lapel and says nothing about it. Neither does NBC or the sponsors . . . and that's even more eloquent.

It's a new age.

Mondo Cane footnote:

Last Saturday I asked: Why should a censor go to all the trouble of keeping children away from unsuitable movies only to have these films slip through the back door and into the living room two years later on TV?

I have been button-holed and phoned by readers who, I hope, express a minority view because they all chant the same theme:

What right has the government to censor anything at all?

These readers have formulated new definitions:

What is suitable for children? Everything!

What is obscene? Nothing!

That, gentlemen, is unmitigated balderdash.

TRUDEAU AND PRIME MINISTER PEARSON

Up Goes Barbara Along With Skirt

NEW YORK (AP) — Barbara Ferris has found her success going up with her skirt.

The 25-year-old British actress is starring in There's a Girl in My Soup, a caper about off-hand romance that's turned out to be the most successful of recent comedy arrivals on Broadway.

In it, she frolics in thigh-high Mary Quant fashions. The rising hemline is a recent development.

"Actually, when it began I was quite reserved and could take it just above the knee. But once you get onto a new fashion, you just relax with it."

"My husband John Quested, an English film producer, gave it to me three years ago. Now it's gone from knee-length to nine inches above, and I've told him next year the pleats may disappear entirely."

Skintights plus knickers — her word for panties — and a bit of care while sitting or bending are all that's needed. And when wintry winds blow, she's ready with high boots and fur coat.

Miss Ferris, a snub-nosed, 5-foot-3 blonde with a nicely distributed 100 pounds, reached the theatre by an oblique route.

In five years, however, she has managed a bit part in one film with Sir Laurence Olivier and has persuaded director Joan Littlewood of her ability potential to have another movie written especially for her.

Miss Ferris, born in London's Soho, has been studying modern dance since 14.

She later appeared as a night club entertainer, where Victor Spinetti saw her and urged her to audition with Miss Littlewood who was having a difficult time casting a particular role.

Terrified, Miss Ferris went over — "I didn't know what I was letting myself in for, but the less you know, the more oblivious you are of peril."

The next day, she was in rehearsal for Sparrows Can't Sing, a Cockney happening that she stayed with through its subsequent, successful movie incarnation.

Keep Busy, Says Bing's Wife

In addition to being a wife, mother, actress, teacher, and registered nurse, she now has become an author.

It took her two years to write a lively and merry account of her life with her famous singing husband entitled Bing and Other Things.

"Bing thinks I'm over-programmed," she confessed frankly. "But I lack his lovely ability to play, to relax. I thrive on activity — so much so that I don't really know whether it's a fault or a virtue.

"If I do have a virtue, I suppose it's the desire to follow through. I really like to finish anything I start."

Since her marriage, the former Texas beauty queen has borne three children, appeared in a number of films and plays, and won her cap as a registered nurse. She also has the task of supervising the four Crosby homes.

Behind Kathy's endless energy is the fuel of a deep religious conviction and a desire for social service.

"When I was young my mother once told me, 'Living, Kathy, is giving.' I've never forgotten her remark."

THE WAR GAME
Victoria Premiere
Fox Cinema

Yet it makes you boil inside when you think such things are possible.

People shot like dogs on the street because there are no pain-killing drugs for their radio-active burns!

Men and women groping the streets with seared eyes and arms outstretched for help!

Almost a third of the population of Britain killed, maimed or dying! Police murdered by starving men and women as they try to protect a food storage depot!

Such is the kind of unmitigated horror presented by Peter Watkins, who wrote, produced and directed The War Game at the invitation of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Ironically, the paternal BBC decided it was too horrible for home-viewing audiences — expecially the murder of children. The corporation decided the film should be released to adult audiences through Pathe Films.

Most of the time Peter Watkins plays his horror story straight and as close to reality as possible. It begins with coolly British preparations for an orderly war — the orderly evacuation of civilians, the deployment of troops, the digging of underground shelters.

Then the A-bomb goes off. The screen whitens with its glare; the sound track shudders and all Hell breaks loose. The police kill off the looters; then turn on the hopelessly injured and shoot them like beasts as they writhe outside hospitals which can no longer help them.

Britain is obviously determined to show the full horrors of nuclear war, while wealthier countries avoid the issue.

Scenes depicting the collapse of law and order are said to have been based on the horrors of Hiroshima when the Allies dropped the first A-bomb in 1945.

Kenneth Tynan, writing in the London newspaper The Observer, said:

"It may be the most important film ever made. We are always being told that a work of art cannot change the course of history.

"I think this one might. It should be screened everywhere on earth."

. . . DIAMOND IN THE GROOVE

birthday which he would have celebrated last December.

The Victoria Symphony Orchestra will play Kodaly's most popular work, the suite "Hary Janos" derived from his comic opera of that name, in its next concerts on Feb. 11 and 12.

The opera was popular in Hungary from its first publication but the suite proved even more popular in North America. From the opening glissando sneeze which (according to ancient Hungarian custom) proves the veracity of this tallest of all tales, to the clashing melee of sound which describes the final, ungainly entrance of Napoleon and his court, there is just enough programming to add significance to the descriptive sounds without destroying the attractive music by too detailed a parody.

A marvellous mechanical clock with whirring mechanism, bells chimes, trumpets and a moving band of little soldiers, is vividly depicted by the rolling drums, blaring trumpet, bells and mechanical rhythms of the second movement.

The loping gait, the crashing encounters of the two armies and the hollow mocking moan of the saxophone in the pseudo-funeral march for Napoleon's defeated army which Hary has conquered single-handed, and Napoleon's final complete humiliation, these bring occasion for great mirth to the fourth movement.

Just Like Harlow —Sort Of

PARIS (WP) — Twiggy, looking every bit like Jean Harlow from the neck up, took a second helping of chocolate mousse ("I'm a pig") and announced that she was through with modeling.

That's quite a move for a girl who, as a mannequin, makes an estimated 200 dollars an hour.

Twiggy, who said she's now "aighteen" and weighs 92 pounds, was the same can't-tell-the-front-from-the-back girl — yet her looks have completely changed. It's as if she just stepped out of a silent movie.

Blond curls fluffed out of a tightly pulled-in brown beret. Her kewpie mouth was painted scarlet, her cheeks roughed and her eyes had just brown shadow and mascara. She's through with false eyelashes. Her dress, from her own Twiggy collection, was a striped sweater top over a pleated navy blue jersey maxi skirt, five inches below the knee.

They start shooting in July and hope to be finished in four months' time.

Charlie Chan Next Cult, Firm Hopes

Warner Bros.-Seven Arts devoutly hopes it happens, since the company owns the mystery dramas produced by Fox in the 1930s. A Charlie Chan film festival will be held at New York's Museum of Modern Art March 4-17.

IT'S UP TO YOU

Free Scalp Examinations Given

Hair and scalp specialists will be holding a free hair and scalp clinic in Victoria at the Strathcona Hotel on Monday, February 12, 1968 only.

DON'T RESIGN YOURSELF
This internationally famous expert urges that you do not resign yourself to BALDNESS unless you are already bald. Your only obligation is to yourself—free yourself of worries by getting the facts from an Imperial expert today.

WHO CAN BE HELPED?
Will this treatment cure BALDNESS? No. We cannot help men or women who are slick BALD after years of gradual hair loss. BUT where your scalp still grows hair, Imperial can save and improve what you have.

THE IMPORTANT THING IS:
don't wait until it is too late. Learn how BALDNESS can be stopped and NEW HAIR grown on your scalp, in the privacy of your own home.

DELAY INCREASES PROBLEM
Remember that even on smooth bald heads, hair roots may still be alive and capable of growing hair again after proper stimulation and home treatment care. Increased hair production can only be achieved by initiating activity in quiescent—follicles—preventing them from going into the permanent resting state.

GET THE FACTS
If your condition is "hopeless" he'll tell you so frankly. About 5 per cent of those he examines are hopeless.

SEE IMPERIAL TODAY
I want to make it clear to you that you incur no charge or obligation by coming in for an examination.

REMEMBER

See Mr. Noble at the Strathcona Hotel on Monday, February 12, 1968, between the hours of 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. Ask the desk clerk for Mr. Noble's suite number. ALL examinations are given in private, no obligations.
